Woman Flier Hops From Honolulu on 2,408-Mile Ocean Flight. . . .

Heavy Downpour Fails to Deter Her

Honolulu, Jan. 11 (AP).—Amelia Earhart Putnam hopped off from Wheeler Field, near here, at 4:45 p. m. today (10:15 p. m. Eastern standard time) on a projected solo Pacific flight to Oakland, Calif., 2,408 miles away.

Although Wheeler Field was heavy from a downpour that started more than two hours before her take-off, the adventurous flier refused to postpone her plans.

At 4:20 p. m. her plane was wheeled from its hangar and given a 10-minute warm-up. There was a hasty assessment of weather conditions prevailing over the long water route and Miss Earhart decided to go.

The heavily loaded plane streaked down the runway for about 3,000 feet and then Miss Earhart pulled it off the muddy field without any apparent effort. It carried 522 gallons of gasoline and weighed 5,800 pounds.

The plane settled back a little but took hold of the air again as it gained speed and started to climb.

Within six minutes Miss Earhart was 2,000 feet up. She headed directly for Diamond Head, the last point of land on the long journey.

George Palmer Putnam, Miss Earhart's husband, said that if she did not return to Honolulu 30 minutes after the take-off time, she definitely would keep going.

This was in accordance with earlier plans. She arranged to take off fully loaded and equipped, but to turn back if the weather was found to be too unfavorable.

The United States Weather Bureau said conditions were "rather favorable" toward the coast, but better toward Los Angeles than Oakland.

Miss Earhart, said the bureau, would strike head and crosswinds up to 4,000 feet. No reports were had by the bureau above that altitude, but it said that some westerly winds usually were above 12,000 feet.

The last half of the more than 2,400 miles to California would present more favorable winds from the northwest, with some from the west. It would be cloudy most of the way.

AMELIA EARHART PUTNAM.

Amelia Earhart Flying Over Trail of Death

San Francisco, Jan. 11 (AP).—Amelia Earhart Putnam is seeking to cross a stretch of water which already is the tomb of ten equally ambitious aviators, one of them a woman.

Succeeding where others have failed, however, is not a new role for Miss Earhart. She was the first woman to fly the Atlantic (June 17-18, 1928) after that ocean had claimed the lives of three women fliers while a fourth had been rescued at sea.

First of the Atlantic women fliers was the Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim, who took off from Upavon, England, with two pilots August 8, 1927, and never was seen again. The second lost was Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson, who, with three men companions, left Roosevelt Field, N. Y., December 23, 1927, but did not even reach Newfoundland, where a fueling stop had been planned. Elsie Matckay, English girl, disappeared after leaving England March 13, 1928.

Ruth Elder Saved At Sea.

The woman rescued at sea was Ruth Elder, who, with Capt. George Haldeman, took off from Roosevelt Field October 11, 1927, and was picked up two days later 600 miles off Spain. They had flown 2,623 miles, at that time a record for continuous flight over water.

Miss Mildred Doran, 22-year-old Flint (Mich.) teacher, was lost between here and Hawaii. She was the only woman entered in the dole race to Hawaii August 16-17, 1927, for a first prize of $25,000—the same amount Lindbergh won with his nonstop flight from New York to Paris—and a second prize of $10,000. Her pilot was J. Aggie ("Strawhat") Pedlatr and her navigator Lieut. Vilas R. Knope, U. S. N.

The plane returned once to Oakland Airport for repairs after it had been out about an hour, then took off again—forever. There were rumors some days later of the floating plane being sighted, but investigation proved them false.

Also lost in the Dole flight were Jack Frost, pilot, and Gordon Scott, navigator, of the fastest plane in the race, a Lockheed-Vega, the same make plane Miss Earhart is flying.

Search Plane Lost, Too.

Two days after the race the Dallas Spirit, which had been unable to make the race with the, took off in a search for the missing planes. Aboard were Capt. William B. Irwin, as pilot, and Alvin H. Eighwaldt, as navigator and radio operator. Something happened.

$100,000,000 Cost for Year Of Social Plan

President Seeks Speed; Special Committee in House Asked.

By Robert C. Albright.

A far-flung Federal experiment in old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, maternity, child and general health grants, took shape yesterday, as the long awaited Administration program for social reform moved into the forefront of New Deal measures.

Tempting inducements for State cooperation were held out, and legislative cogs were thoroughly greased, at a conference the President held with congressional leaders. A White House message on economic security will launch the program in Congress next week.

Emphasis will be placed upon speedy enactment, and a special House committee will be thrown into gear to whip the measure into law while State Legislatures, whose supplemental action will give force to the plan, are still in session. The first year of the experiment will cost the Federal Government an estimated $100,000,000.

Has Five Points.

Five points in the program were outlined yesterday by Secretary of Labor Perkins and Capitol advisers on leaving the White House. As tentatively outlined, they were:

An unemployment insurance measure, embodying many of the features of the Wisconsin plan, to be fostered by Federal grants to States.

Grants in aid, for old-age pensions, to begin shortly after enactment.

An old-age pension insurance plan, to be financed by contributions from employed persons not yet eligible for pensions.

Grants in aid for dependent children, including the crippled and handicapped.

Small extensions of Federal aid as a public health measure, embracing maternity cases in its broader scope.

Leaders were in some conflict over the manner of presentation to Congress, but all were agreed that speed is essential. The complex nature of administrative machinery and the building up of special aid funds will necessarily require months to throw all phases of the plan into operation, it was said.

Speaker Byrns said the Administration will present the plan in a single measure, close on the heels

Court Hears Closing Plea In Gold Case

Date for Decision Is Not Known; Division on Opinion Predicted.

By Elliott Thurston.

Attorney General Cummings yesterday concluded the three-day argument before the Supreme Court on the momentous gold cases by a fervid appeal on behalf of what he called the New Deal's "astounding achievement of statesmanship" in repairing the country's credit and currency after the banking collapse.

The tall, tail-coated figure of the Government's chief law officer seemed vibrant with emotion, his voice was impassioned, as he delivered what had more the ring of a political exhortation than of a legal argument. Nine solemn judges, enfolded in their black gowns, listened in unbroken silence to this oratorical crescendo, climaxing the argument on the most important test of New Deal policy likely to reach this final arbiter.

Questions from the bench frequently have broken into the flow of words from the contending lawyers and those from Chief Justice Hughes, directed to the power of the United States to alter its contract in a Liberty bond, appeared to disconcert some of the Attorney General's assistants. At any rate, the Attorney General decided overnight to make a final plea himself—pitched, so he said, on a higher plane.

MacLean Questioned.

Just before he rose to step up to the small mahogany stand provided for those who address the court, his associate, Angus MacLean, Assistant Solicitor General, had faced another fire of questions. The Chief Justice struggled to bring out precisely what the Government's position is as to the right of Congress to change the terms of Government bonds. MacLean, who bears a fairly close resemblance to former Senator Fess and like him is easily flustered, strove to show that the Government had not "repudiated" its bond, even if the explicit terms in the face of the bond had been changed.

The application of this argument to Government bonds held, for example, by a foreign government seemed to be in the Chief Justice's mind as he prodded for the Government's position.

Query of Hughes.

"Does not the validity of international laws depend upon the principle," he asked, "that a sovereign (nation) may bind itself by contract in borrowing money, and that such obligations are sustained as obligations of a sovereign in the tribunals of the world, because it is the essence of sovereignty to be able by contract to bind itself? Otherwise, the sovereign might not be able to protect itself when its sovereignty is in jeopardy and get money with which it might sustain itself."

MacLean said that might be so.

The Chief Justice went on to emphasize that this must be so in international law, and he inquired:

"You are not saying that in international law a government can repudiate its contracts and refuse to pay what it borrows—that its contracts would not be enforceable by courts of arbitration or courts of international law?"

As the government's counsel again agreed he did not mean that, the Chief Justice added, "Government can not go on unless the sovereign has power to make contracts essential to its needs and limit itself with respect to its contracts."

To this line of questioning, MacLean's answer was that, conceding all this, the Government was not thereby debarred from exercise of its powers over money.

Long-Argued Point.

Seemingly, the Chief Justice was turning to a vexing question long since raised as to whether the United States, assuming that it may change the specific terms of a bond contract with its own citizens, ostensibly for their mutual protection, can do so in the case of a foreign holder of the bonds. The argument of domestic welfare does not apply here. Nor does the argument apply that the bondholder is being given dollars of equal or greater

For Rent Control

REP. ELLENBOGEN.

D. C. Rent Bill Would Revive Wartime Curb

Ellenbogen Demands Wide Inquiry and 3-Year Control by Board.

A broad rent control bill that goes back to the World War days in Washington for a precedent was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, as the climax of mounting congressional denunciation of high rents and the scarcity of living quarters here.

Ellenbogen, a member of the House District Committee, said he would not let up until rents are lowered in the Capital and that he intended to demand hearings and intensive investigation of real property values.

As he may be named chairman of the public utility sub-committee of the District Committee, Ellenbogen probably will conduct the inquiry himself at the direction of Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the full committee.

Emergency Declared.

The measure declares that an emergency exists and provides for rigid regulation of rents for three years after its passage, after which it would expire. The regulatory power would be assigned to a commission of three, none of whom could have any interest in the real estate or rental business.

"The provisions of this act are made necessary by emergencies growing out of the war against depression," a foreword of the bill states, "resulting in rental conditions in the District of Columbia dangerous to the public and burdensome to public officers and employes whose duties require them to reside within the District and other persons whose activities are essential to the maintenance and comfort of such officers and employes and thereby embarrassing to the Federal Government in the transaction of public business."

Bill 10 Pages Long.

The bill covers all rental property, save hotels, warehouses, garages, and the like used "exclusively for business purposes." It covers apartment hotels, however, along with apartments and houses.

"For the purpose of this act," the bill states, "it is declared that all rental property, hotels and apart-

U. S. Indicts 9 Film Firms In Trust Quiz

Threatened 'Damage' to Rival Theaters, Jurors Say.

St. Louis, Jan. 11 (AP).—Federal indictments against nine moving picture companies and six of their executives, charging conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust law, were returned today after an investigation which promises more widespread action.

Based on a St. Louis "movie" war, the indictments allege Warners and other major producing and exhibiting concerns canceled franchises under which they agreed to furnish films, sought to intimidate and coerce owners of buildings, and in general conspired "in restraint of trade."

Companies indicted are:

Liable to Jail Term.

The offense charged is a misdemeanor, punishable by a year in jail and a fine of $5,000.

District Attorney Harry Blanton explained indictments named both the Paramount Pictures Distributing Companies, Inc., and Paramount Pictures Distributing Co., Inc., because they are incorporated in different States.

During the three-day presentation of evidence before the grand jury it was learned authoritatively Department of Justice agents had probed claims of antitrust law violation in widespread sections of the country. Other evidence will be presented later, probably at Los Angeles.

Specifically, today's action concerns complaints of Allen L. Snyder, manager of the Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central Theaters, all first-run St. Louis houses.

Opened New Houses.

He asserted that Warner Bros., which at one time controlled the theaters, canceled contracts when they failed to regain control. Later Warners opened two St. Louis houses and now are showing their own films and those of other producers not exhibited by the Snyder theaters.

The Government's case was presented by Russell Hardy and Harold L. Schilz, special assistants to Attorney General Cummings.

It is alleged in the indictments the defendants, in attempting to retain control of the three local theaters, threatened owners of buildings with "great loss, injury and damage" if the houses were operated by anyone other than Warner Bros.

The movie company also threatened, it is charged, to use the entire financial resources of Warner Bros. to eliminate rivals from competition, and to open other theaters to "compete unfairly" with anyone who

Expert Accuses Hauptmann

U. S. Agent Wilson Tells of Gold Notes

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP).—A white-haired handwriting expert in testimony today wedged the Lindbergh ransom pen between the carpenter fingers of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Albert S. Osborn, dignified and assured, fumbled a tiny earphone and serenely told the jury trying Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby that he was certain all 14 ransom notes were the work of the unemotional Bruno.

The notes—beginning with the one left on the windowsill of the Lindbergh baby's empty nursery—cost Col. Charles A. Lindbergh $50,000, although the baby was dead.

Hauptmann, fingering his chin, took the international expert's clear, precise words as if lost in deep thought.

"But One Disguise."

His expression did not change as the 80-year-old witness declared both the ransom notes and much of the prisoner's "sample" handwriting after his arrest were disguised, adding:

"—and that writer didn't have but one disguise."

Hauptmann leaned forward to study his attorneys' album of handwriting specimens just as Col. Lindbergh, too, leaned forward—intent on the large wall charts which Osborn, pointer in hand, was using to show similarities of words and letters. For a moment the eyes of father and prisoner met. Each gazed steadily. Then both sat erect.

Earlier in the day Frank Wilson, U. S. special agent testified concerning the appearance of $2,900 in ransom bills at the New York Federal Reserve Bank on the day the President's gold embargo became effective. The bills, gold notes, were exchanged for silver certificates.

Wilson first identified $14,600 found on Hauptmann's person and in his Bronx home as part of the $50,000 handed over to "John" in St. Raymond's Cemetery, the Bronx, April 2, 1932. Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, who paid the money, says "John" is Hauptmann.

Faulkner a Suicide.

Then C. Lloyd Fisher, associate defense counsel, drew from Wilson that a deposit slip believed turned in with the gold certificates and inscribed "J. J. Faulkner" was not in Hauptmann's writing.

Q. Were you informed the slip had been given to a handwriting expert to compare with the handwriting of Mr. Hauptmann?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what were you informed the result was?—A. That it was not the same writing.

Q. That it was not in the handwriting of Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. Yes.

(Two days after the money exchange incident was disclosed, J. J. Faulkner, an advertising copywriter, plunged to his death from the Chrysler Building. Department of Justice agents said, however, that the dead man's handwriting was not the same as that on the deposit slip).

But the defense had no time to bombard Osborn with queries today.

When court adjourned until Monday he still was on the stand on direct examination, painstakingly pointing to similarity after similarity he found in the ransom notes and the samples Hauptmann wrote by request.

He pointed to hundreds of uncrossed "t's" and undotted "i's" in both batches of script; to recurring peculiar spelling of words such as "singnature;" to stubbornly hyphenated "New-Yorks."

There were these significant developments outside the courtroom today:

In New York, Larry Snofsky, Bronx garage owner, said Haupt-

Fight in Senate On Confirming SEC Forecast

Kennedy Report Sought; 78 Million Bill Is Passed by House.

New Dealists stood together in their first big test of the session yesterday when the House passed the $780,000,000 independent offices appropriation bill.

The House compromised on the demand of the Securities and Exchange Commission for a larger appropriation. It was granted $2,000,000, instead of the $4,000,000 it sought or the $1,649,000 proposed by the Appropriations Committee.

At the same time, it was learned Chairman Joseph B. Kennedy and his four colleagues on the commission face a confirmation fight in the Senate if they fail to submit an early accounting of their activities.

All G. O. P. Moves Blocked.

The overwhelming Democratic majority repulsed virtually every effort by Republicans to change allotments recommended by the Appropriations Committee. The measure now goes to the Senate, which may pass it next week.

Success of the majority leaders in prevailing on their followers to vote as a unit enabled the House to dispose of the bill weeks ahead of schedule and for the time being at least discredited those who have predicted the huge majority would frequently fail to stick together.

A G. O. P. attempt to slice $300,000 from the funds of the Federal Communications Commission, which will investigate the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., was defeated, 63 to 29. The appropriation was left at $1,500,000. The amendment was sponsored by Representative Taber (Republican), New York.

Borah Insists On Explanation Of Works Plan

Senator Joins Those Who Seek Light on Uses of Four-Billion Fund.

By Felix Bruner.

Demands for specific information as to what is going to be done with the proposed $4,000,000,000 which President Roosevelt has asked Congress to appropriate for work relief were increasing yesterday.

Business organizations were attempting to learn just how far the proposed work projects will compete with private business and how much of the proposed appropriation will be used for the purchase of materials.

Senator William E. Borah joined those who are asking that Congress receive some indication of how the money would be spent. At the same time, Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee said he would call Secretary Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, to explain to the committee what expenditures are contemplated.

Use of Fund Being Studied.

Both at the Capitol and elsewhere, amateur mathematicians were busy trying to figure how 3,500,000 men can be put to work for a year, and materials with which they will work purchased, for $4,000,000,000. In this connection increasing support of Senator La Follette's proposal for a $10,000,000,000 appropriation was being expressed by some of the Progressives.

In the meantime, the American Federation of Labor indicated the growing need for employment with a prediction that while an upturn in business may be expected, the upturn will reemploy not more than 1,000,000 persons, leaving 10,459,000 still unemployed.

The committee of business leaders named at the White Sulphur Springs conference last month was meeting in New York yesterday with a view to continuing an or-

House District Body Will Get Plans to Better Police, Courts

Establishment of Magistrate Courts, Reformation of Bail System Will Be Suggested to Committee's Crime Probe.

The Post herewith presents another article in the series dealing with crime conditions in Washington, to which increasing attention is being given by the authorities.

When the crime sub-committee of the House District Committee begins its investigation of crime and law enforcement conditions in the District next week, it will have before it numerous suggestions for making more efficient systems of police and court administration.

Among the suggestions are:

Enlargement of the Metropolitan police force. (The present budget bill would have to be amended to make this possible.)

Establishment of magistrate courts for the handling of minor offenses, thus relieving congestion in the other courts.

Simplification of criminal procedure.

A change in the law to provide that criminal appeals take precedence over civil appeals.

A reformation of the bail system, which is now under investigation by the Department of Justice.

A stronger firearms law.

Provisions for more efficient enforcement of the parole law.

These and other problems already are being considered by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, who is expected to be named chairman of the sub-committee when the District Committee meets Wednesday.

Already one new bill designed to aid law enforcement in the District is on its way through Congress and will be taken up by the committee at its first meeting. That is the gambling bill, which has passed the Senate. It provides that possession of gambling equipment, including number slips, shall be prima facie evidence of guilt. Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, has indicated that the measure will be reported out of her committee immediately for passage by the House. The bill has the approval of the District Commissioners and District law enforcement officials.

Meanwhile, the Department of Justice investigation of police court procedure and other aspects of Dis-

Ban on 'Jaywalking' Is Urged By Van Duzer as Safety Move

Measures to cut the death toll of the streets, including the prohibition of "jaywalking," a vigorous drive against drivers who violate repeatedly important regulations and the exclusion of persons under 21 as drivers of commercial vehicles, were urged yesterday by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, in a report to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

About jaywalking, the traffic director's report brought out this pertinent fact: That a jaywalker is 21 times more likely to be injured and 51 times more likely to be killed than a person who crosses the streets at intersections.

This conclusion was drawn from figures from the first 11 months of last year showing that 42 persons were killed while jaywalking during the period. While only 6.2 per cent of pedestrians are jaywalkers, 77 per cent of pedestrians killed were crossing streets at other than intersections, Van Duzer pointed out.

The dangerous offenses which should be curbed by strict dealing with offenders in a police drive were listed as follows:

Speeding, "particularly on boulevards;" failure to stop at stop signs; failure to yield right of way to both vehicles and pedestrians; failure to yield right of way to cars entering boulevard streets after having stopped and entered intersection; passing other cars at intersections; and driving to the left of the center especially at controlled intersections.

Other recommendations of Van

Saar Propaganda Silenced; 55,000 Outsiders Are to Vote

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Saarbruecken, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 11.—The lid was clamped down on Nazi and anti-Nazi demonstrations today, and thousands of German Saarlanders arriving to vote in Sunday's plebiscite were received in strange silence.

In contrast to the shouts of "Heil, Hitler!" that rang through Saarbruecken's streets with the arrival of other foreign contingents, Nazis' welcoming committees, cautioned by German front leaders, carried signs offering the usual free coffee to the plebiscite visitors.

A hush fell over the rich, densely populated little basin tonight as the thunder of the German and anti-German preplebiscite campaigns died away in the last 36 hours before the voting.

The only disturbance of the day in Saarbruecken were the shouts of "sabotage" that went up from advocates of the status quo (retention of League of Nations government) when the anti-Nazi organ, the Volksstimme, failed to appear on the streets. The paper's nonappearance could not be immediately explained.

Telephoned inquiries to the newspaper office brought the reply it would be "on the streets in half an hour." "A press breakdown—nothing serious," it was explained.

The Volksstimme delayed its appearance, however, far past the half hour and most of the 300 correspondents here to cover the historic

U. S. Advocates Farm Program To 'Play Safe'

(Associated Press.)

Faced by the prospect of declining population after 1960, the National Resources Board yesterday advocated a "play safe" farming program which would not bring disaster in the event of continued unemployment.

The land planning committee of the board, which under Secretary Ickes recently drew up a vast work plan, yesterday estimated that if the birth rate continued to diminish and immigration did not increase, population would reach a peak of 144,000,000 in 1960.

It advocated a $675,000,000 program to remove unproductive land from use during the next 15 years, along with utilization of better acreage now in woods or pastures. The board insisted, however, that agricultural policy depended on industrial recovery.

Farming Population.

If the national economy is so ordered "that all of our human resources could be fully employed in providing for the extensive wants still unsatisfied," the board committee advocated intensive farming. This, it said, probably would make it possible to reduce the farming population one third or one half.

But if "full industrial recovery" was long delayed or unemployment persisted from other sources, the committee said many farmers would have to stay on the land.

It would then be practicable to farm land not suited to intensive cultivation, it said, but this probably "would subject our people to a lower standard of living than is desirable."

The committee said: "Even if we were assured, however, of opportunities for employing all the population that could be spared from agriculture, it seems probable that a middle course will be safer and perhaps socially more wholesome than an extreme form of commercial agriculture.

Large Capitalistic Units.

"The latter may imply, for instance, large capitalistic units dependent in part on hired labor and characterized by a high degree of economic instability.

"On the whole, it appears wiser to strive for the family farm characterized by a reasonable degree of self-sufficiency, interrelated with forest, wild life and recreational resources of the countryside and integrated so far as practicable with other forms of employment or family labor."

Noting that many urban residents tied themselves to farms since the depression began, the committee advised against "trying to make farmers out of urban unemployed."

It indorsed the subsistence homesteads and rural rehabilitation programs, however, with their provisions for part-time industrial employment.

Mill Strikers Ask All Jobs Returned

Meeting Today to Decide on Action in Georgia.

Rossville, Ga., Jan. 11 (AP).—Efforts to end the strike of union employes of the Richmond Hosiery Mill were in the limelight here tonight as the plant made ready to close over the week-end.

Tomorrow the strikers are to hold a meeting to decide on what steps they will take. The mill officials already have offered to arbitrate the 10 per cent wage reduction which caused the walkout, but strikers have insisted all those out be taken back before there are attempts at arbitration.

Mill officials have made it plain there are about 50 workers whom they will not reemploy.

The plants were operating today and officials said 400 were at work, as many as they needed at present. About 450 of the 500 machines were reported running and tonight a second shift was operating the spinning room for the first time since the walkout.

National Guardsmen, sent here by Gov. Talmadge to preserve order, arrested one more man today and charged him with "night rider" activities. Many workers have claimed their homes were visited at night and they were intimidated.

Aviator Arrested As 'Baby Face' Aid

Reno, Nev., Jan. 11 (AP).—Frank A. Cochran, 50, aviator and repair shop operator, was held today in the net spread by Department of Justice agents for a dozen or so residents of the West accused of aiding the late George (Baby Face) Nelson in his long flight from the law.

The fifth Westerner to be arrested in connection with the maneuvers of the gangster through Montana, Nevada and California before his death at the hands of Federal agents at Chicago, Cochran was taken into custody last night.

District Attorney E. P. Carville said a formal complaint would accuse Cochran of warning "Fatson Negri, of San Francisco; John Paul Chase, now in custody in Chicago; and Nelson and Nelson's wife early in October that Federal agents were in Reno.

Between You and Me

Guffey's Political 'Big Stick;' Revival of Tactics; Bankers Watch Cuba.

By Raymond Clapper

FOR those who like their politics tough, in the style of the gay nineties, Senator Joseph F. Guffey is putting on a good show as he sets about to become the Democratic Penrose of Pennsylvania.

It makes you realize how times have changed to watch him in action, because he goes at it so differently from the young moderns like Huey Long and Bilbo. They are mass operators. They first reach out for the crowd, singing "Every Man a King," routing their sound trucks through the country roads, preaching on the creek banks, and phrasing their appeals in the key of the lowest common denominator. When they have mobilized mass power behind themselves, they dig their foundations and begin building their organizations. They work "in" from the outside.

Guffey, on the contrary, works out from the inside. He builds on patronage and personal organization. Though he came to Washington as Pennsylvania's first Democratic Senator in 50 years by grace of the New Deal, he is like an old-fashioned piece of Victorian furniture lodged among the chromium brightwork of the moderns. He didn't enlist in the New Deal. He joined Franklin D. Roosevelt's faction of the Democratic Party. His faction won and he rode into control of Democratic patronage in Pennsylvania, though an anti-Roosevelt leader still is Democratic national committeeman. With that start Guffey built up an organization which, with the help of President Roosevelt's popularity, elected him and his candidate for Governor.

* * * *

Without losing a day's time, Guffey went to work to expand his organization and dig its roots in deeper. He expects to stand in political chronicles as the real father of the Democratic Party in Pennsylvania. He expects to bounce James J. Davis, Republican, out of the Senate next year and he is building up a permanent organization to hold the party's seats in the Legislature.

Guffey isn't bothering much about statesman stuff in Washington. Right now he is engaged in establishing control over the Pennsylvania delegation in the House. Some of these 23 Democrats have been rebellious and Guffey has decided to use the axe on one of the ring leaders, Representative William M. Berlin.

* * * *

There is an old feud behind it. Berlin comes from Westmoreland County, the home of the Guffey family. A year ago when Guffey was lining up his slate and had picked George Earle, 3d, as his running mate for Governor, Berlin balked and joined up with Judge Charles D. Copeland, president of the Westmoreland County courts who became a candidate for Governor against Guffey's man. With that Representative Berlin was promptly put in the dog house by Guffey.

Berlin wasn't to be easily subdued. Although Guffey was supposed to be controlling Pennsylvania patronage at Washington last winter Berlin was scouting around and landing considerable of it himself. In fact, Berlin has so many proteges in Government jobs here that when he was called to his feet at the Guffey testimonial dinner the other night, he received a volume of applause rivaling only that of the guest of honor.

Berlin decided he wanted to go on the powerful House Rules Committee and he obtained signatures of 20 Pennsylvania Representatives indorsing him.

The story went around that Berlin was planning to run for the Senate next year.

* * * *

At this point Senator Guffey decided to put Berlin through the wringer. There won't be anythink weak-kneed about it either. That Guffey has a heart of flint is evident from the fact that the handsome fellow has remained unmarried all of these years. He passed out word that Berlin was not to go on the Rules Committee. Immediately Berlin's 20 indorsements began to melt like snow in the summer sun. Indignantly he wrote to members of the House Ways and Means Committee which selects members on other committees protesting against Guffey's dictation. But he didn't get the Rules Committee place.

The latest development is that word is being passed around to Federal agencies not to give appointments to persons recommended by Berlin. Anything Guffey says is okay with Jim Farley.

American bankers who have heavy interests in Cuba are keeping a watchful eye on the preliminaries to the adoption of a new constitution there. Jefferson Caffrey, American Minister to Cuba, has been in Washington discussing with President Roosevelt and the State Department various problems, among them, it is understood, the future of American loans. Winthrop Aldrich, head of Chase Bank interests, which are the heaviest holders of Cuban loans, made an appointment to see President Roosevelt a few days ago, but it was canceled because of the President's cold.

The present regime in Cuba has taken several steps which disturbed American holders of Cuban securities. A moratorium on the amortization payments on Cuba's foreign debts to terminate whenever the annual national revenues may total $80,000,000 was signed by President Mendieta soon after he took office. Last summer, restrictions on export of funds from Cuba were invoked. A committee appointed to study public works financing held invalid certain loans contracted by the Machado government amounting to about $60,000,000 which had been floated in New York and Chicago.

American officials, however, take an optimistic view of the outlook. For one thing, President Mendieta has built up considerable good will. He made a hit by agreeing to play ball with Secretary Morgenthau in suppressing liquor smuggling to the United States and this Government in turn has put on a heavy drive to prevent smuggling of arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists.

Premier Flandin, who is launching a modified NRA as part of a New Deal in France, gathered his inspiration for this experiment while visiting President Roosevelt at Hyde Park last September. He then was an inconspicuous member of the French Chamber of Deputies and spent two hours at luncheon with Mr. Roosevelt, who was then struggling with plans for reorganization of NRA by setting up a board to supplant Gen. Johnson. They talked the New Deal over in French. Flandin left, saying that Mr. Roosevelt was a great guy, or words to that effect.

President Discusses Ban on War Profits

President Roosevelt talked over legislation "to take the profits out of war" at a luncheon conference yesterday with Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Mr. Baruch, chairman of a Presidential committee studying this subject, declined to say when his report might be made, adding that "it depends on the scope of the problem."

In reply to a question, he denied that he is interested in any tin mines in Bolivia, or elsewhere. The acquisition of a quantity of tin, a necessity in time of war, has been considered by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

'Hot-Oil' Flow Sped in Texas; Survey Starts

Ickes Promises Committee Will Make Quick Report on New Control.

An increasing flow of "hot" oil from the Texas fields last night speeded efforts to unite the industry and the Government behind one legislative proposal to replace Section 9(c) of the NIRA which the Supreme Court held unconstitutional.

Oil Administrator Harold L. Ickes appointed a special committee of five men to survey the effects of Government control on independent and small petroleum enterprises.

Ickes promised the committee would complete its survey quickly and that its report would guide him in making recommendations on whether the oil powers of the invalid section should be enacted in constitutional form or whether broader powers should be asked.

Committee Members.

Members of the committee, none connected with the oil administration are:

Paul Blazer, president of Ashland Refining Co., Ashland, Ky.; Mason Houghland, president of Spur Distributing Co., Nashville, Tenn.; Sidney Swensrud, economist with Standard Oil Co. of Ohio; H. B. Fell, executive vice president of Independent Petroleum Association of America, Ardmore, Okla.; R. E. Allen, secretary of the committee of California Oil Producers, Los Angeles.

A Government agent at Tyler, Tex., in the heart of the huge eastern Texas field, reported that 1,020,000 gallons refined from illegally produced or "hot" oil were shipped Thursday. Ten refineries also were said to have reopened and were using "hot" oil.

Opposes "Dictator."

Meanwhile Representative Sam Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, announced he would not support legislation which would set up one man as "dictator" over crude oil production, the nation's third largest industry.

Ickes placed the national gasoline allotment for February at 32,560,000 barrels, a daily increase of 42,000 barrels over January.

He also announced approval of plans for developing three new oil pools. These were the Vedder field, Kern County, Calif.; Hall pool, Russell County, Kas., and Rubel pool, Englewood field, Los Angeles County, Calif.

Court Adherence Debate on Tuesday

Proponents Confident as Foes Gird for Fight.

Senate Democratic leaders yesterday tentatively set Tuesday for beginning debate on the resolution for American adherence to the World Court, according to the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, court proponents forecast ratification by the necessary two-thirds majority of the three protocols of accession within a week after floor arguments began.

The opposition, led by Senator Borah, Idaho, and Johnson, California, Republicans, contested this claim, and went ahead with preparation of long speeches arguing against America entangling herself in any manner. The opposition also is counting heavily on emergency measures coming forward to furnish excuses for laying the court aside.

Democratic Leader Robinson has warned a filibuster would make its participants look foolish in the eyes of the people in view of the long time devoted to the court issue in the past.

Chief of Agriculture Expelled by Red Party

Moscow, Jan. 11 (AP).—Sergei Kiroff's assassination at Leningrad December 1—for which 117 persons have paid with their lives—today led to the discharge and expulsion from the Communist Party of I. Reingold, chief of the agriculture commisariat's cotton department.

The action against Reingold was taken, it was announced, because of his association with L. Faivilovich, his assistant in the cotton department, who was arrested in connection with the murder.

Sweden Cheers As Depression Is Left Behind

Gustaf Reports Solution of Ills Near; Budget Is Balanced.

Stockholm, Sweden, Jan. 11 (AP).—Sweden celebrated the apparent end of her depression today as Parliament, opening its regular session, commemorated the 500th anniversary of its founding.

In his annual message, King Gustaf told the lawmakers that solution of the problem of unemployment appears to be near.

The government has been able to balance the budget, he reported, without imposing new taxes or floating large public loans. The national debt will be reduced this year about $10,000,000, he said.

Testifying to the fact that Socialist Sweden, by dint of foresight and long-range planning, has beaten the depression was the government's request for only $15,000,000 for unemployment relief. This compared with $40,000,000 appropriated last year, and $45,000,000 two years ago. Half of last year's appropriations remained unspent. The number of unemployed dwindled to 80,000, just over 1 per cent of Sweden's population.

The story of public relief in Sweden—a story several American New Dealers deemed worthy of close study—was unique, in that the government appropriated much more money than was actually needed.

A definite upward economic surge now has made the nation almost completely stranger to bread lines and soup kitchens. At the worst of it, even, none went hungry, it is asserted.

Paradoxically, Sweden has devoted more time and attention to problems of public relief than most other countries, and the visiting American Government officials have expressed the opinion Sweden's social welfare program is in many ways the ultimate goal of the New Deal.

Preparedness had much to do with the freedom from suffering when the depression struck.

Chavez Forwards Notice Of Contest for Senate

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 11 (AP). Dennis Chavez (Democrat) said today formal notice of his contest for the long-term Senatorship from New Mexico had been mailed to the secretary of the United States Senate.

The State canvassing board last week issued a certificate of election to Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican independent, on the basis of an official majority of about 1,300 votes, after the State supreme court had refused Chavez' request for an order directing the board to disregard returns from San Miguel County.

House Is Urged To Scan HOLC 'Irregularities'

Rep. Sweeney Condemns Delay in Loans; Blanton Joins Attack.

An investigation of alleged irregularities in the failure of the Home Owners Loan Corporation to approve more loans was demanded of the House yesterday by Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio.

Sweeney failed in an effort to have the resolution passed immediately. Instead, it was referred to the Rules Committee. Minority Leader Snell insisted on immediate action as well, contending there would be no opposition to the proposal and committee consideration would result in unnecessary delay.

Another attack on the HOLC was led by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, who sought to eliminate from the independent offices supply bill an item of $264,000 for payment of the salaries of officials and employes of the corporation.

Autocracy Charged.

"I want these officials to change their autocratic ways of treating members of Congress," the Texan said. "If you want to change them right quickly just take away their salaries."

Blanton threatened to ask President Roosevelt to remove certain HOLC executives from office. He added it might be necessary to institute impeachment proceedings if the White House declined to intercede.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, at first was unable to gain the floor and the House approved Blanton's amendment. Later Woodrum assailed the Blanton plan as "childlike" and persuaded the House to reverse itself and reject the proposal.

Fahey Quoted.

Introduction of the Sweeney resolution focused attention on a recent statement by John H. Fahey, HOLC chairman, who announced no additional applications for home mortgage refinancing would be received. He said many pending applications "can and should be" taken care of by private lending agencies.

The latest statement from the corporation revealed it still possessed $1,200,000,000 of its original $3,000,000,000 appropriation.

About 30 bills to add from $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 to HOLC funds for additional loans already have been introduced in the new session of Congress.

Rayburn Asks Bills to Curb Utility Stocks

President Reopens Drive on Trusts With Report on Investments.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt returned to his attack on utility holding companies yesterday, as Sam Rayburn, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, fired the opening gun on Capitol Hill at the corporate structure of the power industry.

In a speech bristling with invective, Representative Rayburn prepared the way for legislation soon to come by calling on Congress to regulate the holding company or else to amputate "this cancerous growth on our body politic" altogether.

Mr. Roosevelt renewed his battle with the utility interests by personally making public a report by the Federal Power Commission in which it was shown that savings bank and insurance company investments in holding companies are negligible.

Policy Defended.

By this means the President sought to dispose of the "widows and orphans issue"—the contention of the Edison Electric Institute that the Administration's campaign for cheaper rates is damaging the interests of those helpless classes of the population.

For a month or more, Mr. Roosevelt declared, he has been reading about how innocent children and widows are the victims of the New Deal's power program. It represented a very definite effort on the part of a certain group, he continued, to frighten the people.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned no names, but observers recalled the recent statement of Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Edison Electric Institute, in which the "widows and orphans" point was made. This statement, directly following a White House conference, added fuel to a raging fire.

Investments Questioned.

In calling on the power commission for a special report, Mr. Roosevelt said he was actuated by a belief that the custodians of small savings, the savings banks and insurance companies, do not go in for holding company investments. This belief, he asserted, is borne out by the facts developed.

Both the President's remarks and Mr. Rayburn's caustic speech were regarded as the beginning of a New Deal barrage against holding companies, which has for its purpose legislation to bring them under the regulation of the power commission and also to force them to open up their books.

A report containing such recommendations is now being completed by the commission, and within the next two weeks will be sent to Capitol Hill. Whether Mr. Roosevelt will provide a special message to accompany it, or whether he will leave it to Administration leaders on the Hill, has not been decided.

The commission's report on public utility securities, submitted by Vice Chairman Basil Manly, declared that life insurance companies and savings banks own few preferred stocks and practically no common stocks in holding companies. This is in accordance with State laws restricting investments to "safe and conservative" securities, it was pointed out.

Investors Traced.

While wary of holding companies, six large life insurance companies of New York State and 15 others whose portfolios were examined were found to be heavy investors in the bonds of public utility operating companies. These bonds, the report set out, have appreciated on an average of 6.6 points from September, 1929, before the market crash, to November of last year.

Applying this average to the 51 standard life insurance companies, whose public utility bond holdings were $1,658,209,000 in December, 1933, the report estimates an enhancement of $109,441,000 since the depression. Thus, summing up, the report declares that "widows and orphans and other beneficiaries of estates likewise are secure," provided investments have not been in "stocks or debentures of holding companies or so-called investment trusts."

Listing 17 abuses of which holding companies might be guilty, Mr. Rayburn declared that under this form of financing billions in property can be controlled by a few men with comparatively small investments. His remarks were preliminary to several reports by his committee, now being printed.

"We want you to consider whether or not the Congress should undertake to regulate these superholding companies or lay down a policy under which they will disappear," he declared, then added significantly:

"In an effort merely to regulate these companies utmost care must be used lest by implication we put the stamp of approval upon all the stock-watering and unjustified inflation during the past 15 years."

Couch in Conference.

Later in the day, Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Harvey Couch, former director of the RFC, who heads the Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi power and light companies. Mr. Couch declined to comment, but did not deny that he had explained to the President his plans for rural electrification in Arkansas.

Taking a tip from the TVA, Mr. Couch has launched surveys looking to extending his lines into rural districts on easy-payment terms. Under his plans, the power company would advance money to farmers for equipment and stock by means of which they could afford to use more power. It was indicated he regards this as a concrete example of cooperation with the New Deal.

buying power than those originally loaned.

For the foreign holder of a United States bond the point is not what the dollar is worth in American commodities but what it is worth in his own currency. The question arises whether the foreign lender on an American bond did not buy it as a guarantee of payment in gold to insure himself not against domestic depreciation of the dollar but against a loss in exchange. This troublous question is, like other questions, obtruding in the gold cases beset by political complications—notably by the war debts. Congress, in the Johnson act, already has displayed a feeling that the war debtors have repudiated their bonds. Congress, therefore, has not taken kindly to the thought of making good on American gold bonds held by the war debtors, at least.

Attorney General's Plea.

The Chief Justice did not pursue the matteer, or rather MacLean shortly gathered up his papers and retreated. It was against this background that the Attorney General projected himself for his final and most impassioned plea. He began, suavely, by thanking the court for its consideration and the time allotted to the cases. He suggested that if points had remained insufficiently expounded, the Government stood ready to come back upon call of the court.

Then he launched into discussion of the importance of the gold cases—two arising on private bonds of railroads, one on a Liberty bond, and another on a gold certificate. An adverse decision, he went on to say, would "have consequences so intermingled with the life of our people that it would be difficult to define them."

"Permit me to say," he continued, "that what was done, was not done thoughtlessly, but after the most careful, painstaking study and consideration—and with consecrated devotion to deal rightfully with all of our people. The problems involved are interlaced with all of our daily life, with foreign exchange, foreign commerce and aspects of sovereignty. The burden of deciding what was to be done was one of the highest responsibility. The course embarked upon was one of supreme necessity."

Flight of Gold.

He spoke of the flight of gold, which he elaborated by quotations, one from Herbert Hoover's speech, sharply challenged by the Democrats in the 1932 campaign, that the country was within two weeks of going off gold. Mr. Roosevelt, he said, had invoked the monetary action in order "to stop the terrible consequences of deflation, and to maintain the equal parity of the currency."

The opposition, he contended, was saying in effect that the situation should have been permitted to go to "complete collapse" and an attempt thereafter to "build upon the ruins of that collapse."

"If it is true, as I think it was, that we were forced off the gold standard," he continued, "then we were faced with a predicament of having billions of gold obligations outstanding."

He asked if the opposition could have devised "what would have saved them from the excesses of their fellow citizens."

"It was an almost impossible predicament," he exclaimed. Then he put in his tribute to the "astounding achievement of statesmanship under the circumstances," which, he said, had saved the Nation's credit and maintained the equal power of all of its currency.

Necessity of Power.

He said that unless the Government could end gold clauses it would "be many generations before we could release ourselves."

And he ended with an expression of the "utmost confidence" that the Government would be sustained.

Earlier in the case, the Attorney General had said "chaos" would result from an adverse verdict. He has stressed the point that if new instead of old dollar equivalent of gold has to be paid it will make an estimated $100,000,000,000 of private and public gold obligations come to $169,000,000,000. He has emphasized that the effect would also be to give gold bonds a premium value, to depress the stocks of corporations owing on gold bonds, to add to the load on railroads and utilities and to erase the differential in favor of American goods in exchange.

Government Argument.

In other words, the Government has put vast emphasis on what would happen if action already taken is undone rather than upon the legal issue of the power of Congress to abrogate gold clauses and whether gold bonds must be made good at the new or old price of gold.

The guessing game which has gone on among the laity who have followed the cases is unabated. The impression still prevails that the court may render another of its famous divided opinions. When the decision will come down is not known. The court meets today in its usual Saturday conference.

Capital Debates Effect Of Adverse Decision

There was much unofficial speculation in the Capital yesterday as to what the Administration would do if the Supreme Court should decide against it in the gold clause case, the Associated Press says.

Some held the Treasury would continue paying face value, dollar for dollar, in the new currency until ordered to make a change by Congress. Others suggested that in the 25 days between announcement of a decision and rejection or approval of a plea to reconsider, the personnel of the court might be increased from 9 to 11 through special action by Congress.

Another suggestion was that the President might proclaim an emergency and take control over the currency as he did in the financial panic of his first week in office.

Courage Urged By Hook in Plea For Industry

Calm Views Advocated on Controversial Issues in Recovery Plan.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—A plea for "courageous expression of opinion" on controversial recovery policies, but "without anger or excitement," was voiced tonight by Charles R. Hook, vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"The greatest need of the hour is for calm, careful and unprejudiced thought on the part of Congress and upon the part of those who would give advice and counsel to Congress and the Administration," he asserted.

"We can be persistent without being antagonistic. We can defend the truth without asserting a life. An old Greek philosopher once said: 'Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad.' Let us hope that his counsel will prevail and that anger shall be absent from our deliberations."

Mr. Hook, speaking over a National broadcasting hookup, reviewed the formulation of business leaders' "platform for recovery," in which he took a prominent part. The platform was presented to President Roosevelt, who was reported from Washington to have read it but withheld comment.

Hook said the business leaders were "actuated solely by the desire to direct attention to the difficulties business has encountered in the path of recovery," but did not comment on the platform's reception at the White House.

Warns of Reform Acts.

"Recovery in the durable goods industries" and "just employment relations" were listed by Hook as requisites to permanent business recovery. He asserted the Securities Exchange act of 1934 barred needed expansion in capital expenditures.

"In our endeavor to correct evident evils existing in some parts of our business fabric," he said, "we have enacted reform measures which, instead of being framed to catch the culprit and leave unharmed the innocent, have been so drafted as to place officers and directors of business corporations and banks in a position which prevents them from attempting the issue and distribution of securities."

Commending the Administration's home construction program as a needed stimulant to heavy industries, Mr. Hook warned that the "Federal Government should not assume or attempt to control local relationships between employes and employers."

'Chance in Million' Comes Too Late For Fever Victim

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Stanley Walker, 12, the boy who had one chance in a million, died today of the streptococcus infection he had fought for more than a month.

His millionth chance depended, physicians said, on obtaining the blood of 1 of the 11 persons in the city who had recovered from the malady.

A public appeal was made for a donor. Police radio cars searched the city for 1 of the 11. Newspapers cooperated in the search.

Finally, on December 13, Leon Zaskevich, a 30-year-old fur salesman, riding home on a bus, read of the case in a newspaper. He himself had recovered from the disease. He left the bus and notified the hospital of his willingness to aid the boy.

His blood was found satisfactory. That night a transfusion was made, and two days later a second was administered. The boy rallied, and physicians were hopeful he might recover.

It looked as if Stanley might get that one in a million chance. He continued to hold his own for the next few weeks, but yesterday he began to fail. He died in an oxygen tent.

Manchukuo Emperor Reported Gravely Ill

General Pershing Is Felled by Door Of His Own Car

Gen. John J. Pershing was knocked down by the open door of his automobile yesterday in front of the Carlton Hotel. He was not injured and returned to his office in the State, War and Navy Building, where he spent the afternoon at work.

Friends said Gen. Pershing had just alighted from his car, on his way to luncheon, when acquaintances approached him. As he stood talking, another car came into the drive. The General's chauffeur started up, not knowing the door was still open.

of publication Monday of a comprehensive report by the President's Cabinet committee on economic security.

This was at odds with a statement by Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana, who also attended the White House conference. Van Nuys insisted Congress will be allowed to work out separate bills for each of the reforms, with the economic security report received by committees in evidence.

The Indianan expressed the view that farmers and their help, railroad workers, high salaried employes and school teachers would be exempted from the unemployment insurance phase of the program. He said persons unemployed when the act takes effect would not be immediately eligible.

"The success of the program will depend on State cooperation," he said. "Inducements will be held out in the form of Federal grants to States whose legislatures enact legislation prescribed."

Although the Wisconsin unemployment insurance plan, which provides benefits ranging between $5 and $10 a week, will not be given the force of Federal law, it was said encouragement would be offered States enacting such legislation.

$40 Maximum Seen.

Participating with Secretary Perkins, Speaker Byrns and Van Nuys in yesterday's White House conference were Senator Wagner, of New York, and Representative Lewis, of Maryland, co-authors of the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill, and Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady. Lewis is expected to offer the Administration measure in the House, and Wagner, in the Senate.

Of the total $100,000,000 Congress would need to appropriate the first year, leaders anticipate that $50,000,000 will be required for old-age pensions alone. Less than 1 per cent would be contributed by employed persons to a Federal old-age pension fund. Pensions, it was said, would range upward to a maximum of $40.

Financing of the unemployment insurance program through a 3 to 4 per cent pay roll tax, is said to be contemplated, although an effort will be made in Congress to require employes to carry a small portion of the load. The Wagner-Lewis measure proposed last year called for a 5 per cent pay roll deduction.

A tentative health insurance plan to give free medical attention by private physicians to those engaged on work relief projects, would cost an estimated $2,000,000.

Senator Van Nuys said it is inevitable that the cost of the broad program will be eventually passed on to consumers, increasing the price of finished products by an approximate 1 per cent.

It was said leaders anticipated little if any opposition to the program, although a minority attempt may be made to expand it. Speaker Byrns will determine today whether he will ask the House Rules Committee for a rule to create the special House committee Miss Perkins thinks should handle the legislation.

ganization for the expression of business views. The resolution adopted at the White Sulphur meeting opposed work relief as too costly. The directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce will meet next week and probably will have something to say about the President's program.

Borah Asks "Fullest Data."

Senator Borah, in a statement, said he believed Congress was entitled "to the fullest information practicable as to the contemplated plans and projects and methods of spending this money.

"Congress must necessarily be liberal in authority," he said, "but those who are going to expend the money should be liberal in information before the appropriation is made."

Senator Borah expressed himself as opposed to any increase in the proposed appropriation, indicating he believed $4,000,000,000 was plenty for a blanket appropriation.

Meanwhile, leaders in Congress were planning to speed the transfer of $880,000,000 from unexpended balances to take care of Government relief needs until the works program gets under way. Hopkins has set February 10 as the last day on which the FERA can operate without additional funds. It is possible that the rule limiting debate will be invoked to speed the resolution transferring the funds through the House.

Light Thrown on Project.

Figures on public works projects compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics threw an interesting light on the question of whether $4,000,000,000 is sufficient to carry out the President's plan for putting 3,500,000 men to work.

The report for October showed that during that month Federal PWA projects employed 349,060 men, almost one-tenth of the number the President proposes to put to work directly. These men were paid $19,654,169, and the materials used in their work cost $32,618,280. On this basis, employment of 3,500,000 men for a year would cost nearly $2,500,000,000 in pay rolls and $4,000,000,000 in materials.

Of the PWA men employed, 192,498 were engaged in road work, one of the projects proposed by the President. In this classification materials amounted to almost twice the amount spent for wages. Others were engaged in building construction; river, harbor and flood prevention work; on naval vessels, reclamation, forestry, water and sewerage work and miscellaneous projects.

Plans to Cut Wage Rate.

The average wage paid was just over 60 cents an hour. In this connection, President Roosevelt plans to reduce the pay roll by paying under the prevailing rate of wages. Men on PWA projects are paid the prevailing rate in their communities.

Other than an upturn in business, or adoption of the 30-hour week, the only immediate hope for employment is the President's program, the Federation of Labor statement said. It estimated that adoption of a 30-hour week throughout industry would put 4,000,000 men back to work.

The federation also estimated that the average worker's income last year was $813 below the amount needed to keep a family of five in "health and decency."

Mate Has 2 Divorces; She Calls Both Illegal

Charging that both a Mexican and a Reno divorce obtained by her husband were invalid, Mrs. Helen Gronding Patton, Postoffice Department employe, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to annul her marriage to her thrice-married spouse.

The wife said that she was married in 1933. Prior to that she said, her husband had procured a divorce in Reno in 1928, and another in Mexico in 1932. Both were invalid, she claimed, because neither he nor his then current wife was a resident of the jurisdiction in which the severance was obtained.

Expert Stresses 'Singature' in Tracing Notes to German

Spelling Cited, With Symbols, In 14 Letters

Flemington, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Lindbergh kidnaping ransom notes, with their crytic symbol signature, preempted attention today at the murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the prosecution started out to prove the notes came from the pen of the alien former convict defendant.

Albert Osborne, sr., head of the State's handwriting experts, was scheduled as the first witness. But Attorney General David T. Wilentz said that to accommodate Frank Wilson, special agent of the United States Department of Internal Revenue, who has to return to Washington, the State would interrupt the presentation of its handwriting case long enough to allow Wilson to testify.

Wilson said that he, Elmer Trey and Mr. Madden, other Federal agents, went to the Hopewell home together.

He was asked by Wilentz about preparation of the $50,000 in ransom bills.

Q. Did you direct the preparation of the money?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. Tell us how you did that, please.—A. It was done at the J. P. Morgan Co. A package of money had been made available and prepared, but without obtaining the serial numbers. At this time I directed them to have two men work on each note—each piece of currency—noting the numbers on each side and paying attention to the kind of currency. That is, whether it were a gold note or some other kind of money. I instructed them to use gold notes whenever possible. I also instructed them carefully to retain the original sheets on which the numbers were recorded so they might be used later at a trial.

The agent said he likewise suggested this list be kept in the custody of one person.

$14,600 Exhibited.

Wiltenz asked who had the custody of that list.

"Mr. Stewart Edward Cragin," Wilson said.

Q. On April 4—after the payment of the ransom money—did you have a conference with Col. Lindbergh? A. I did.

Q. As a result of that conference did Col. Lindbergh ask the United States Government to try to find some of the money which had been paid? A. Yes. Col. Lindbergh in my presence wrote a letter to the Treasury Department making such a request.

Wilson said that 966 bills handed Lindbergh were all recorded serially.

"There is here $14,600 of that money," Wilson said.

Q. You knew that Col. Lindbergh was prepared to pay thousands of dollars to the criminals in the hope that he would get his child back? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any effort to apprehend the criminals or to interfere with the negotiations? A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you know it was your duty to apprehend the criminals? A. Yes.

Developed No Clews.

Q. Did you develop any clews in your investigation indicating you expected to close in on the criminal?—A. No.

Q. Where was the first ransom bill picked up?—A. The first that we know of was in a bank on Broadway near Seventy-second street. That was on April 7 or 8, 1932. The second was taken in and came to light in a lower Broadway restaurant.

He set the date at approximately May 1, 1932.

Q. And you have not learned that ransom money has been passed outside the United States?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you know that one deposit of $3,000 of the money was made by Max Schlang, a florist of New York City?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know that on the day the gold embargo became effective $2,900 of the ransom money was passed in the Federal Reserve bank in New York City?—A. Not that sum. It was $2,980.

Q. Was it passed by one person?—A. I don't know, there was no way to trace it.

The agent said that a "J. J. Faulkner" had passed that amount of money in the Federal Reserve Bank that day.

Committed Suicide.

"But he couldn't be traced," he added.

Q. Isn't it true that J. J. Faulkner committed suicide from the Chrysler Building in New York shortly after that?—A. I don't know about that.

Q. Do you know if the Faulkner bank slip was submitted to handwriting experts for comparison with the defendant's handwriting?—A. I was informed it was taken care of.

Q. What was the result of that examination?—A. The agent said the handwriting was not Hauptmann's, according to his information.

Q. How much ransom money, exclusive of the money here and the $2,980 of the Faulkner deposit, has been turned in to the Treasury?—A. I don't know. I know of approximately $1,000.

Q. Who would have that knowledge?—A. The cashier of the United States Treasury.

Fisher asked if $18,800 would be a correct total for the money recovered.

The witness nodded.

Q. Then at the moment, so far as you know, there is roughly $31,000 which has not been returned to the United States Treasury and is not in your possession at the time of this trial?—A. Yes.

The defense counsel asked if money had ever been recovered in Philadelphia, Chicago or Washington.

Again "No, sir" was the answer.

Q. Do you know if any bills were found in the safe of the Earl Taylor Hat Co., New York?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever know it was passed by one Meyer in New York? A. No, sir.

He said that "25 or 26" men had knowledge of the recording of the ransom serials.

"That includes Col. Breckinridge and Col. Lindbergh," he added.

On redirect examination Wilson expressed the opinion that of the $31,000 of the ransom still unaccounted for, some of it might have come into the Treasury during the President's gold embargo without detection.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Bruno Richard Hauptmann worked at the Majestic Apartments?—A. Yes, sir.

A defense objection was sustained.

Q. Now about ransom money slipping back into the Treasury Department. What were the instructions?—A. There were orders to the Federal Reserve and other banking institutions to make a careful search.

Q. And these orders were issued by no less authority than Herbert Hoover, President of the United States.—A. Yes.

Wilson then explained patiently that when the country went off the gold standard the influx of gold notes to the United States Treasury made a careful check impractical.

Schwarzkopf Called.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, was called.

Q. Who wrote them?—A. Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Q. Under what circumstances were they written?—A. Inspector Lyons, of the New York police department, explained to Bruno Richard Hauptmann we wanted specimens of his handwriting and asked if he was willing to give it. He said 'yes' and from a circular then published Inspector Lyons dictated.

Q. Is the spelling his own?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Referring to whom? — A. Hauptmann.

Examined Ransom Notes.

Q. When did you first see the ransom notes?—A. May, 1932.

Q. Did you examine them at that time?—A. I did.

Q. Did you photograph them?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you examine them later?—A. I had many occasions to examine them and the writings of well over 100 different possible writers of the ransom notes to see if these or any of these wrote the ransom notes.

Q. Did you reach a conclusion?—A. The conclusion was the writer of the ransom notes had not been found.

Q. Have you made a careful comparison of the ransom notes with the conceded and requested writings of Bruno Richard Hauptmann? —A. Yes.

Q. Does it give you sufficient material for a conclusion? —Yes. The amount of the writings is ample on which to base a conclusion.

Q. What is the conclusion, the opinion?—My opinion is that the ransom notes were all written by the same hand that wrote these writings signed Richard Hauptmann.

He was asked how many specimens he had examined, and he replied: "I think it was 14."

Q. How do you explain your conclusion?—A. Hand me my brief case.

"I first examined these ransom notes in May, 1932. I wanted to see if they were connected with each other, and I found that they were in seven or eight different ways.

"They were connected, in my opinion, by their use of words, spelling—peculiar spelling—by the statement of the amount of the ransom mentioned in the first letter and repeated in later letters, and by the statement in later letters of not reporting to police.

"But mainly I was impressed by the peculiar and ingenious device which appeared in the lower right-hand corner."

The witness turned to the first note left in the nursery.

He called the jury's attention to the sentence, "We warn you for anyding public or for notify police," words which were repeated verbatim in a subsequent note.

The word "singature" for signature was stressed.

Speaking of the symbol, he said the two concentric rings were made by "some implement which did not take ink well—a crude device, such as a bottom of a bottle or porcelain or china cup.

"But the most significant things are the holes."

"The three holes," he said, "were connected with each other unmistakably.

"A pattern was made, and they were all of that pattern.

"They were in the same relation to the edge and bottom of the paper.

"You could hold them up to the light and see through all the holes.

"They are uniform.

"It would be impossible to make them from a description, because they are all the same mechanically," he said.

"The Same Writer."

"That is more than misspelling," the expert opined. "They can hardly be described as misspelling; they are a peculiar combination of letters."

He noted a difference in the first ransom note, the one found on the Lindbergh nursery window sill.

"The first letter is written with more deliberation," he said, "than any other letter."

"But," he added hastily, "it was the same writer."

Assistant Attorney General Joseph Lanigan directed Osborn to continue his discussion of the ransom signatures.

"In further explanation of the identity of these so-called devices or signatures, I have transparent films of these 11 signatures."

Films Exhibited.

He exhibited to the jury some transparent films, joined in one corner, so that examination could show whether any two of the symbol holes are identical. Examination shows they are identical, he said.

"It's much easier to compare these films than the originals," Osborn said.

The witness paused.

Q. Are they correct reproductions?—A. They are correct.

"I have here the request writing and nonadmitted writing of this person," Osborn went on.

"There are three possibilities with regard to their similarity.

"The first is that they are written by the same writer.

"The second is that the similarities and identities came as a matter of accident or coincidence.

"The third is that the identities and similarities are due to intended imitation.

"In brief, either these two sets of writings are written by the same writer or one is an imitation of the other," he concluded.

"In my opinion the ransom notes are connected with this standard writing of Richard Hauptmann in all three ways—occasional characteristics, standard characteristics, and unusual characteristics," he said.

"In my opinion all letters were written in a disguised hand, somewhat disguised."

The jurors, impressed at first with Osborn's description, had begun to lose interest when several huge photographic charts were unrolled and tacked to the wall.

The charts showed comparison of the handwriting of Hauptmann and that on the ransom notes. As Hauptmann saw his writings, enlarged possibly 15 times, his ears turned red, but he indicated no emotion.

Mrs. Hauptmann looked on; her lips slightly parted; and Lindbergh leaned forward intently.

The jury watched the expert with reawakened interest.

Several albums of the charts were passed among the jurors. Col. Lindbergh studied fixedly the large charts against the wall.

Hauptmann studied the defense counsel's album of miniatures of the same charts.

The two looked up simultaneously. Their glances met and were steadfast for a moment, then both assumed an upright position.

Adjournment was taken at 4 p. m. until 10 a. m. Monday.

mann, a month after the kidnaping, took his 1930 sedan to Snofsky's garage and had the green fenders painted black. A State witness, elderly Amandus Hochmuth, already has testified that Hauptmann, in a "dirty green car" with a ladder, glared at him near the Lindbergh Hopewell house on the day of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932.

At Yonkers, N. Y., Mrs. Anna Bonesteel, restaurateur, said she saw Violet Sharpe, Morrow housemaid who committed suicide during the kidnap probe, enter a car with two men in Yonkers the night of the kinaping. Repeatedly the defense has stressed the Sharpe suicide. Yonkers police told New Jersey authorities of Mrs. Bonesteel's story.

It was thought at Leipzig, Germany, that Hanna Fisch, Corporal Spaude, of the Leipzig police and a former corporal who trained Bruno Hauptmann in the German army, are being brought to the United States by Detective Arthur Johnson, who investigated Hauptmann's German antecedents. Hanna Fisch is a sister of the late Isadore Fisch, from whom the carpenter claims he got the ransom money.

The mass of handwriting exhibits which Osborn dealt with so forcefully will be scrutinized over the week-end by a battery of defense experts.

Court a Laboratory.

Osborn turned the ancient courtroom into a laboratory today. First he explained his analysis of the ransom notes and of Hauptmann's handwriting; then the State produced enlarged photographs of words from the two sets of writings and the expert compared them slowly and carefully.

Every eye was upon him when he accused Hauptmann as the ransom penman.

Q. (by Assistant Attorney General Joseph J. Lanigan) Have you made a careful comparison and examination of the so-called ransom notes with the conceded writings and the request writings of Bruno Richard Hauptmann?—A. I have.

Q. Does the amount and the character of the writing which has been placed before you for comparison and examination give you sufficient material upon which to base a conclusion?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you reached a conclusion as to the writer?—A. I have.

Here there was considerable dispute between attorneys as to the form of the question, the defense contending Osborn should be asked to state his "opinion."

Q. (By State's Attorney Lanigan). Based on your examination and comparison, what is the opinion you have reached?—A. My opinion is that the ransom notes were all written by the writer of the various papers signed "Richad Hauptmann."

His testimony gave the defense support for its contention some one else had the ransom bills before Hauptmann got them. Wilson, who is in charge of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, said the first of the ransom bills was located April 7 or 8, 1932, in a bank on Broadway not far from the Majestic Apartments, where Hauptmann was employed before the ransom payment.

Wilson disclosed that approximately $31,000 of the money has not been traced, and said he had no knowledge of the appearance of any of the bills since Hauptmann's arrest.

Joe Penner Stands Up At Flemington Trial

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP). Joe Penner, screen, vaudeville and radio star, arrived at the Hauptmann trial this afternoon.

Penner was placed in the position of many of his own fans. There was "standing room only." He stood against one of the walls of the court room for two hours while Albert D. Osborn compared the handwriting of Hauptmann and the ransom notes.

Hauptmann Welcomes Bird in Cell as Omen

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11 (U.P.).—The small bird—a starling or blackbird—which flew into county jail during the fog yesterday, still flitted about Richard Bruno Hauptmann's cell tonight.

Hauptmann was said to be pleased by the visit, which he regards as a good omen. The bird perched on a cornice outside his cell all night. Guards said they were "too busy" to chase it out.

Clothes at Trial Run the Scale From Silks to Indian Blanket

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP).—The best dressed persons in the Hunterdon courtroom are Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, and Hannah Williams, former Broadway show girl and wife of Jack Dempsey.

Anything in the dress line goes at this trial, from a formal morning coat to an old straw hat or an Indian blanket. Fur-lined overcoats and derbies top summer sports shoes and riding boots. Women come at dawn, swathed in their son's windbreakers.

Reilly is sartorially perfect in gray striped trousers and cutaway or an oxford gray sack coat. The flower in his lapel is always a bright spot. One day it was yellow, and on another he wore a white carnation. He arrived at court in a fur-lined overcoat, spats and a derby.

Judge Wears Old Hat.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard drives up impressively in a green limousine, wearing a fur-collared coat and a woolen hat he has had four years. On the bench, the 71-year-old autocrat of the court is robed, but he flings the robe back, exposing a gray homespun suit.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has worn a gray suit at every session, usually with a light blue shirt.

Betty Gow, the kidnaped Lindbergh baby's Scottish nursemaid, has been the best dressed witness. She wore a Princess Marina hat with a jaunty feather, a close-fitting brown dress and high-heeled suede slippers.

"Country Gentleman."

Lloyd Fisher, of defense counsel, wears careless clothes and looks like a country gentleman, but his colleague, Frederick A. Pope, has turned out in a prince albert.

Bruno Hauptmann is neatly dressed in the gray suit he wore at early stages of the court proceedings, a tan shirt and dark tie. Mrs. Hauptmann wears a black or dark blue dress, a small black hat and a black coat with an imitation fox collar.

Dr. John F. Condon appeared on the witness stand in a celluloid collar, a red, knitted necktie, a baggy suit of funereal black and heavy brogans. He had with him a huge overcoat and an old hat. A chain with an old-fashioned watch fob was looped across his vest. Splashes of color are all over the courtroom. There are the frocks of attorneys' wives, secretaries and spectators. The jury box is bright when Mrs. Rosie Pill wears her blue and white poppy print, or Mrs. Ethel Stockton her lipstick red dress.

The weighty women jurors like bold prints, especially Mrs. Verna Snyder, who never takes off her beige coat with its striped flat fur collar. Three women jurors removed their hats after the first day, but Mrs. Pill still wore her black felt sailor.

Robert Cravatt, the one unmarried juror, came to dinner in the Union Hotel in a slipover sweater. In court, the eight men on the jury wear dark suits.

Germans Linked To Bruno Believed On Way to Trial

Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 11 (AP). The belief that Commissioner Staude, of the local police; Hanna Fisch and a corporal who trained Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the German army are accompanying Detective Arthur Johnson to New York, was expressed here today.

The New York detective sailed for New York Tuesday aboard the steamship Ile de France from Havre. With him were three unidentified persons, reported then, however, to have been a man and two women.

Commissioner Staude assisted Johnson in the investigation into Hauptmann's past. Johnson studied the history of Isadore Fisch, the man Hauptmann said gave him the money identified as the Lindbergh ransom currency.

Civic League Hits Building Violations

Brookmont to Scrutinize Future Transactions.

A strong campaign to prevent violations of building restrictions in the community was voted by the Civic League of Brookmont and vicinity at a meeting at the home of Dr. H. H. Donnally.

It was declared at the meeting that instances have been noted where builders were constructing houses at a cost below the minimum required in covenants running with the land. The league voted to scrutinize future building transactions closely to prevent a recurrence.

Approval also was voted of a resolution presented by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce to the County Civic Federation seeking to establish adequate school provisions as the paramount objective of the civic organizations. The league's delegates to the federation were instrueted to vote for retention of the present accredited standing of Montgomery County high schools.

Sleeping in Woods Fatal to Inventor

Youth Who Devised Diesel Attachment Succumbs.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Edward Cuno, 22, of Denver, Colo., inventor of an attachment to a Deisel engine, died here today from exposure suffered Tuesday night when he slept in the woods on ground wet from rain.

Cuno, tall and slim, had taken to the unbeaten trail some months ago. Wednesday he came to the Salvation Army here desperately ill from cold which developed into double pneumonia.

A letter saying that his invention "would be valuable in a few years" and a watch inscribed "From mother to Jack" was found on his person.

Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy, of the Philippines, will come to Washington next month, it was stated at the War Department yesterday. According to a cablegram received by Secretary of War Dern, Murphy will leave the islands January 23 for San Francisco. He is coming here to confer with Administration officials on insular affairs.

Drastic Rental Curb Measure Is Introduced

Ellenbogen Bill Declares Housing Emergency to Exist in District.

ments are affected with a public interest and all rents, charges thereof or service in connection therewith and all other terms and conditions of the use or occupancy thereof shall be fair and reasonable, and any unreasonable or unfair provision of a lease or other contract or agreement for the occupancy of such rental property is hereby declared contrary to public policy."

The bill, ten full pages in length, goes into detail in describing the functions of the commission and the rights of tenants to take their greivances to it for adjustment.

While it follows in some respects the recommendations of the Public Utilities Commission as submitted to the Senate District Committee last session, the bill goes much further in extending authority to the commission.

Utilities Board's Bill.

A bill based on the Public Utilities Commission recommendations is now being drafted by Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman at the direction of Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and will be submitted to Congress soon.

The three members of the rent commission proposed by Ellenbogen would be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Their salaries would be $5,000 each and their terms the duration of the act.

An attorney with a salary of $3,500 and a secretary at $3,000, together with other employes as needed, are provided. The bill carries an appropriation of $30,000, half of which would come from the United States Treasury and half from District revenue.

Under the terms of the measure the commission could either on its own initiative or upon receipt of complaints decide on the reasonableness of rents charged for any dwelling rental property. Its decision would become effective upon announcement, but the landlord would have ten days in which to file an appeal in the District Supreme Court.

Many customary legal rights of landlords would be suspended during the life of the act. For instance, a tenant might continue to occupy a rental property so long as he paid his rent and complied with other terms even though his lease expires. Should the landlord withdraw any services or permit an unsafe or insanitary condition to arise, the commission could impose a judgment on him, and the tenant might sue for damages in court.

Punishment for Evasion.

Any person who would attempt to evade the act by entering into an agreement to accept a bonus or participate in a fictitious sale, or otherwise try to evade the law, would be subject to $1,000 fine or a year's imprisonment, or both.

The commission would have authority to subpena witnesses, seize records, and conduct investigations into rental conditions. The subpenas would extend over the United States with the right to call on United States courts for aid.

The District tax assessor is designated an ex-officio and advisory assistant to the commission, but without any powers. He would be paid an extra $500 for this job. All District government employes could be called upon to perform services for the commission.

While Ellenbogen's bill is the first to reach the congressional hopper, other members have announced that they intended to sponsor legislation regulating rents in the District.

Senator King has been outspoken in his charges that rents are excessive, and Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, has announced that he would offer a rent control bill. He also is a member of the House District Committee.

Hauptmann Trial Probably to Last Four More Weeks

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 11 (AP).—Indications tonight were that the murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann would take four more weeks.

The prosecution said that, although they had made good progress in the first eight days, they expected it would take two more weeks to get their case before the jury.

Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly said recently that it would take him approximately two weeks to present the German's defense.

That would take it to about February 8.

Mme. Sembrich Dies; 'First Lady Of the Opera'

Compeer of Caruso, Scotti; Retired in 1909 at Height of Fame.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Marcella Sembrich, one of the great singers of all time, died today at her home overlooking Central Park.

The prima donna—a compeer of Caruso and Antonio Scotti, of Lilli Lehmann and Nordica—was 76 years old. She had been in ill health for several years.

Though she retired in 1909, with a demonstration such as the Metropolitan Opera seldom has experienced, she was known until her death as "The First Lady of the Opera."

On that February night in 1909, surrounded by every member of the Metropolitan company, the stage filled with floral tributes and gifts, she told the audience:

"I am retiring because I like the sun best when it is high. It is better that I leave when everyone is asking 'why?' than later when my ability might be less."

Start of Career.

Her career started in the little Galician town of Lemberg (now Lwow in Poland). Here she was born Praxede Marcelline Kochanska. Her father was the village music teacher. He started her studies when she was 4 years old. First, the piano; then the violin at 6; voice a few years later.

The pianist, Wilhelm Stengel, soon took her as his pupil. In a few years, Stengel took her to the great Franz Liszt. She played the piano, the violin; she sang. Liszt, after a few moments of silence, said:

"You have three pairs of wings, little one, on which to fly to fame. You can become a great pianist, a great violinist, or a great singer."

She chose the last named.

Series of Triumphs.

In 1878, she went to the Royal Opera in Dresden. From then on, it was one triumph after another. Covent Garden heard her in "Lucia" in 1880. Then to Berlin, the opera of the Czars in St. Petersburg. The Metropolitan sent to Europe for Sembrich. In "Lucia" she made her debut in the "Met's" first season—in 1883. She was then 25 years old.

Always, she remained a favorite. The house was filled when she sang in "Lucia," Rigoletto," "The Barber of Seville," "La Boheme," "Traviata," or "The Marriage of Figaro."

Sembrich's Swan Song.

Then her retirement. On that memorable night, Caruso sang with her. This was fitting. For it was with Sembrich in "Rigoletto" that Caruso made his debut before the "golden horseshoe" in November of 1903.

After her retirement, Sembrich continued in concert work for some time and, until a few years ago, gave instruction. One of her best-known pupils is Dusalina Giannini, who now is scoring great successes abroad.

Until a year ago, she kept up her work as director of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. The institute gave her the degree of doctor of music last year.

Plans to Better Police, Courts Prepared Here

Suggestions Will Be Made to House District Committee.

trict law enforcement still is under way. The findings resulting from this investigation are expected to be made available to the crime sub-committee.

Advocates of establishment of magistrate courts point out that last year 55,000 cases were handled in police and traffic courts. They insist that as a result preliminary hearings in felony cases and more serious misdemeanor cases are not given sufficient attention.

The bond situation is looked upon as particularly important. There have been repeated reports that professional "fixers" have preyed upon accused persons and that bondsmen have been able to use the same security over and over again in providing bail.

Law on Firearms.

The firearms law being advocated would require everyone in possession of a gun to register with the police and would make possession of an unregistered gun a felony.

In a study of the general crime situation, the sub-committee will find that in addition to murder, robbery and burglary, there were 5,150 felonies reported to the police during the last fiscal year. Automobile thefts alone totaled 3,169. The others included assault, arson, rape, larceny, forgery, extortion, mayhem and nearly every other crime, except kidnaping.

Of the 5,150 cases reported, 3,881 were cleared by arrest. All felonies reported during the year totaled 8,875. Police reported that 6,376 of these were cleared by the arrest of 4,919 persons.

U. S. Attorney's Report.

The report of the United States Attorney for the fiscal year showed that 1,244 criminal cases were handled. Of these 1,166 were completed during the year and 78 were continued until the next term of court. Juries returned guilty verdicts in 166 cases and 755 guilty pleas were accepted, making a total of 921 convictions. Forty-nine persons were acquitted and 192 indictments were nolle prossed. Four defendants were dismissed on motion, 210 cases were pending, ten persons were in jail awaiting trial, and 57 were on bond awaiting trial. In 143 cases the defendants either were fugitives or motions in their behalf were under consideration by the courts.

Barber's Tonic Sets Off a Fire On Patron's Head

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Either Charles Athey has too much electricity in his hair or the hair dressing that a barber was rubbing into his head today contained a high per cent of alcohol, or both, for Athey is nursing a badly scorched forehead suffered when the preparation suddenly ignited while he was seated in the barber chair.

Several barbers rushed to his assistance with wet towels and extinguished the blaze before all of his hair had been burned off.

'Undesirables' Face Clean-Out

'Spotting Squad' of Police Will Open Drive Upon Shady Element.

Washington soon will have a "spotting" squad of from four to six detectives, whose duties will be to rid the Capital of undesirable outsiders who apparently come here to commit crimes.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday ordered Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, to detail men to this squad.

They will work in all parts of the city, ferreting out undesirables who have criminal records and no visible means of support.

Attention of the squad will be focused, of course, on Washington's underworld, but hotels also will be watched.

"There have been occasions when persons with criminal records have been in the city apparently for no good reason," said Maj. Brown yesterday.

"We intend to rid the city of all undesirables who seem to be a menace to law and order."

Bill Asks Increase In Widow's Pension

Late Soldier's Invention Saved U. S. $1,000,000.

Representative Withrow (Democrat), of Wisconsin, sought yesterday to provide a captain's pension to the widow of a master sergeant who donated to the Government an invention said to have saved the Treasury Department an estimated million dollars, according to the Associated Press.

He introduced in the House a bill which would increase, to $157.50 a month the pension of Josephine Nelson, of Phoebus, Va., widow of Paul Nelson, formerly of La Crosse, Wis. Mrs. Nelson now receives $30 a month.

Representative Withrow said Nelson, who died during the last year, had turned over to the Navy Department a mine control system of his own invention. He said Government figures showed the invention had already saved at least a million dollars and would result in further substantial savings. Nelson, he said, had not received a penny for the invention.

'Jaywalkers' Face Ban Here In Safety Drive

Duzer included the equipping of street cars with signalling devices to indicate intention of the motorman to stop or turn; establishment of additional downtown taxicab stands and prohibition of cruising by cabs.

Re-examination for Drivers.

Re-examination of all drivers when they seek renewal of their permits also was recommended. Many persons observed in violations have been found ignorant of existing rules, Van Duzer said. Restoration of the 10-day temporary permit pending investigation of the applicant also was suggested.

The traffic director revealed that a check of 664,497 pedestrians at every light-controlled intersection showed that 240,611 crossed the street on the red signal instead of the green.

Four persons, Van Duzer said, were killed in the first eleven months of last year while crossing against signals. In the fiscal year of 1934, three persons were killed and 122 hurt while crossing against signals, while 2 were killed and 67 hurt crossing with the signal.

"These figures," Van Duzer said, "indicate that although signals do not afford absolute protection to pedestrians at an intersection, it is 3.27 times more dangerous to cross against the signal and 2.67 times more deadly."

Right of Way Explained.

"At no place in this area is a pedestrian required to wait over 32 seconds before receiving the signal and the crosswalk space is adequate for the volume except for a few hours on Saturday afternoon.

"It frequently happens, however, that the pedestrian is unable to make use of the full time allowed by the green light and that he is forced back to the curb by vehicles making right and left turns. Under the regulations as now written the pedestrian has the right of way when he is crossing on proper signal. If anyone is to wait it must be the driver and not the pedestrian."

Outlying boulevards take a large toll in accidents, analysis of figures shows, Van Duzer said. Observation of 860 automobiles on Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Connecticut avenues, and on Bladensburg road, where a 30-mile limit is allowed, showed the cars traveled at an average speed of 33.7 miles an hour and speeds varied from 10 to 67 miles, with 46 per cent of the cars traveling faster than 30 miles. The average speed of this 46 per cent was 40.3 miles an hour, Van Duzer said.

Silence Forced As Plebiscite In Saar Nears

All Propaganda Forbidden and Hosts Arrive for Ballot Tomorrow.

battle of ballots smelled another sabotage story.

A correspondent climbed three flights of steps in darkness to find the newspaper's editors working by candle light. The electricity in the plant had been cut off—or short-circuited. Whether Nazi sabotage was involved could not be determined.

Jumpy Nerves Betrayed.

The incident, however, served to illustrate the jumpy nerves and excitable emotions of the Saarlanders on the eve of one of the most vital elections in Germany's history and one of the most important tests Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime has yet faced.

Solemnly today 900 neutral foreign plebiscite officials who will preside over the polling places Sunday and help count the ballots the next day swore themselves to silence. They pledged themselves not to speak to anyone about the plebiscite results until after the official announcement.

The discretionary powers which the 900 neutral foreigners hold over the balloting are so sweeping that the whole outcome of the plebiscite may fairly be said to depend on the coolness and impartiality with which they exercise their functions.

Each has the right to refuse the ballot to any voter who behaves as though he intended to cast it for Germany.

Saarlander Hosts Arrive.

Likewise, each has the power to disqualify any voter who shows intentions to vote for union with France, or for the status quo.

The Saarlanders arrived in nine special trains from Germany today. The vanguard of 48,000 expected to return to the Basin in time to vote Sunday, stepped down at Saarbruecken to confront large forces of mounted and foot police surrounding the railroad station and guarding adjacent streets.

The number arriving today was approximately 8,000, half of whom remained in Saarbruecken while the other half went on to the Saar communities in which they will cast their votes. Forty thousand more were scheduled to arrive tomorrow.

The total of "imported" voters in the Saar, coming from Germany and France, Asia and Africa and the Americas, was expected to reach 55,000 before the polls close Sunday night. Since they constitute approximately 10 per cent of the plebiscite voters, they may conceivably hold its outcome in their hands.

Not until Tuesday morning will the world know how the Saar has voted, and not until the League of Nations Council passes on the results of the voting will it learn just what the Saar's future status is to be.

Virginia's Capitol Square

This is another in a series of articles dealing with the functions of the administrative branches of the Virginia government.

By Warren A. MacNeill
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11.—"Historical valuations" of properties of public utilities operating in Virginia, prepared by the State corporation commission's own staff, soon will be available for use of that department in fixing rates to consumers.

These valuations, based on a careful study of what the various properties actually cost the utilities, will supplement estimates of the cost of replacement, and are being prepared by a newly established division of the commission which was authorized by the last General Assembly and is one of the divisions supervised by Thomas W. Ozlin.

In the division of duties between the three commissioners, Mr. Ozlin is given supervision over matters of taxation, details of which are supervised by R. E. Steele; insurance, handled by George W. Bowles; securities, handled by C. M. Chichester, and public service accounting, the new division headed by O. E. Zacharias.

Work Started in 1933.

The accounting section had its beginning in 1933 when the commission, finding itself in need of an independent study of valuations to compare with studies submitted by the utilities themselves, employed the Allen J. Saville organization for this purpose.

The following year, with authority of the 1934 General Assembly, it added the new accounting department to its valuation division and Mr. Zacharias and his assistants started their work in cooperation with commission engineers who actually examine the properties and estimate their replacement cost.

Mr. Zacharias says the purpose of the accounting division is to make a correct determination of the cost, at the time they were acquired, of property used in rendering services in Virginia. This involves a study of whether or not allowances for depreciation of the property are reasonable, whether it still is in use and is furnishing services exclusively to Virginia consumers and whether properties worn out or otherwise removed from actual use have been removed from the total of capital used for rate making purposes.

Operating Costs Studied.

Study also is made of charges for operating and supervising made by holding companies and other items of overhead which, if improper, might result in unduly high rates to Virginia consumers. The 1934 Assembly also authorized the corporation commission to pass on all future management agreements involving Virginia utilities and to prevent unduly high charges being made for services rendered.

Mr. Zacharias said that studies of past agreements have shown instances where a company having control of an operating company in Virginia, through stock ownership, has made charges out of all proportion to the management service it actually gave, and has passed these excessive costs on to the Virginia customers.

The commission also has power now to pass upon prices paid for new properties acquired and to prevent repetition of instances in which a small company has been bought out for a certain price and then had its value "written up" for inclusion in the rate base of the purchasing company.

Site Deals Investigated.

The accounting division also studies purchases of such properties as power sites intended for further use and sees that these are not included in the rate base until they actually are placed in use. Otherwise, it is pointed out, a company could purchase extensive land which would be in reality an investment, but make the public carry the costs of it until it was used, or perhaps until it was sold at an advanced price without ever having been used.

The accounting and engineering divisions of the commission work in close cooperation in the valuation studies, Mr. Zacharias says, but he expects the historical valuations to play an increasingly important part in rate hearings as the commission assembles more complete data.

The division also makes studies to determine whether gross operating revenues, operating expenditures and net operating profit items are properly handled. As an example of difficulties encountered it is pointed out that companies have been found keeping three different depreciation accounts. Property is depreciated at one rate for purposes of deciding on profits available for dividends, at a different rate in making tax returns to the Federal Government and at a third rate in deciding the capital value on which rates are to be based.

Remaining functions of the corporation commission will be reviewed in the next article of this series to be published by The Post on Tuesday.

Parley Is Urged By Prosecutor

Maryland State Attorneys Told to Get Together on Legislation.

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—A conference of all the State's attorneys of Maryland was suggested today by J. Bernard Wells, State's attorney of Baltimore City.

Wells said he had written to the prosecuting officials of the various counties, suggesting that they meet to determine the future activity of the State's Attorneys Association of Maryland.

He pointed out that the recent election decidedly changed the personnel of the prosecuting attorneys of the State and now there were approximately 14 new State's attorneys in office. Several of the officials of the association also have gone out of office, including Herbert R. O'Conor, its president, who is attorney general.

Wells proposed that the prosecutors meet in the near future to lay plans for any legislation which may be desired from the General Assembly during the current session concerning criminal matters.

League to Seek Return of Reich To Jurisdiction

With Saar Issue Settled Sir John Simon Will Head Movement.

Geneva, Jan. 11 (AP).—A concerted effort to get Germany back into the League of Nations and the framework of European peace will be launched as soon as the Saar issue has been definitely settled, statesmen here for the January session of the League Council said tonight.

Anxious to lay the specter of war, leaders of several nations, headed by Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, will cooperate in an effort to induce Adolf Hitler to withdraw Germany's resignation from the league.

After meeting briefly to indicate its confidence that Sunday's Saar plebiscite would be orderly, the council session adjourned to reassemble Monday to be in close touch with tabulation of the ballots.

Representatives of the great powers were disappointed over Germany's decision not to be represented at the council session which will consider the Saar's post-plebiscite status, but they believe the Reich might consent to send delegates if the vote indicates any possibility of division of the territory between German and league control.

The statesmen assembled here likewise were convinced no real international serenity is offered for the future until Germany returns to effective participation in the League of Nations.

Admittedly much depends on how far the powers are willing to go in legalizing rearmament for the Reich.

Appalachian Valley Authority similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority. It would be authorized to spend $50,000,000 in developing the valley.

Five projects listed included three dams and two reservoirs. The administrative body would comprise three individuals appointed by the President. They would be paid $10,000 a year each.

Senator Couzens, of Michigan, minority member of the Senate Banking Committee, and other members whose names were withheld, feel the Securities Commission has been remiss in not delivering a comprehensive report to the Senate.

A move to force each of the commissioners to appear individually before the Senate committee and explain in detail what they seek to do with the $2,000,000 SEC fund appropriated yesterday by the House is under consideration.

Disgruntled Senators, who say they don't want the commission to become "topheavy," think Kennedy should explain the commission's objectives.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

In a Little Jersey Town.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 11. With Broadway discussing nothing but the Hauptmann trial, you will pardon my desertion of my own Dawn Patrol for this last survey of another Main Street. . . . I doubt if this peaceful and picturesque little township, snuggled away in the Jersey hills, ever will be quite the same again after Hauptmann's trial ends. . . . Flemington's residents have been given a taste of champagne, distilled on page 1, bubbly and exciting beverage that goes to the head. . . . A Broadwayite wonders if they will return to the stout and ale of everyday existence with great enthusiasm. . . . In five weeks or six weeks, the town will have become sophisticated. . . . The residents probably will be as blase as those of us who live in New York. . . . New Yorkers are impossible because they have seen the tallest buildings, the greatest railroad terminals, the greatest financial institutions, the greatest radio stations. . . . Flemington's residents, having seen the Hauptmann trial on their main street, never will be impressed again by anything less than superlatives.

* * * *

"Erected A. D. 1828" . . . The white courthouse is not so huge as some of our new edifices, but it breathes of antiquity . . . Here probably the men of this Hunterdon Township took oath before they marched away to the Civil War in 1861, 33 years after this courthouse was erected . . . The courtroom itself, reached by winding wooden stairs, is picturesque . . . Eleven huge windows, four slit in each side wall, three behind the judge's bench, let in natural light, and five electrical fixtures overhead are a modern complement . . . Facing the judge from the rear of the room, which is the entrance, is a tiny inverted semicircular balcony, four rows deep . . . This, to a country boy looks like the choir loft in a small church and I half expected to hear, at any moment, the squeak of a hand-pumped organ . . . The court is crowded, absolutely covered with humans . . . An endless chain of telegraph messengers extends down each aisle, passing one to another the hand-written dispatches of the writers who are doing what we call a "running story" for the afternoon papers, and services . . . In this way, the copy is shot out of the courtroom to waiting telegraphers with a minimum of delay.

* * * *

SPATS, white carnation and fur-lined coat of Edward J. Reilly, head of defense counsel, have given a superficial picture of him that does not square with the facts . . . Newspapermen, the most critical and irreverent jury to all, like Reilly immensely, and I'm glad of that because he is a swell person . . . He is effective in a courtroom because, like most great actors of the Broadway stage, he prefers understatement and "underplaying" of a scene to shouting and badgering . . . Jafsie and other witnesses who have faced this quiet-voiced prober become acutely uncomfortable and start shifting and squirming . . . It is as if the witnesses were thinking to themselves: "His quiet voice isn't on the level—he's got a bombshell up his sleeve" . . . State Attorney Wilentz, thin-faced, dark-eyed, gives an impression of tremendous effectiveness . . . He knows the case intimately, knows at all times where every paper and document can be located . . . Wilentz, undemonstrative, modest, must make a tremendously favorable impression on court and jury . . . That is a Broadwayite's verdict.

* * * *

Al Reich, the former heavyweight fighter, was a credit on the stand to the rough art of self-defense . . . He was intelligent, polite, honest . . . Hauptmann sits in the same row with Lindbergh, only six people separating them . . . Hauptmann leans back, Lindbergh leans forward . . . Lois Long, Quent Reynolds, Adela and myself, lunching at the Union Hotel directly across from the courthouse, took a table next to the table at which the jurors sit . . . We ate more than the jurors did, belying the popular suspicion that the jurors were feeding up in preparation for a long winter . . . Sheriff Curtiss, of this county, deserves the gratitude of all newspapermen covering the trial, and so does Bob Conway, of the New York News . . . It was Conway who learned of one newspaper's plot to ally itself with Frank Hague and grab off all the choice courtroom positions for reporters and cameramen . . . Sheriff Curtiss wrecked the Hague plan and ran the whole thing fairly and competently . . . Regardless of what you think of the trial, you are impressed by the devotion of Bruno's wife . . . She's in there, trying to root him home . . . Her loyalty might be recommended to all wives and remembered by all husbands . . . I tip my hat to her.

* * * *

I RECOGNIZE nearly every writer here . . . Some of them are brilliant reporters, like Marty Sommers and Grace Robinson . . . Some of them are celebrated "color" writers, like Adela Rogers St. Johns . . . They are the dramatic critics of the most compelling drama ever acted out on any stage . . . Broadwayites seem strangely out of place in this atmosphere . . . Yet Broadway discusses nothing but the trial and argues it heatedly . . . The other night Rudy Vallee was annoyed by the hum of voices at a ringside table . . . He didn't know it but the disturbers were heatedly arguing the case that has excited the country . . . I return now to my own Dawn Patrol and somehow it seems less interesting.

NRA Official Sees End Near In Price Fixing

'Will Fall by Own Weight,' Says Whiteside at Board Hearing.

(Associated Press.)

A. D. Whiteside, NRA Administrative Board member, told businessmen yesterday that price fixing eventually would fall "of its own weight."

"There is no Federal law that can regulate supply and demand," Whiteside said at a hearing on the board's proposal to remove price control provisions from most codes.

A law, he said, however, might "put supply and demand into some order in times of stress."

Opposition to the board's proposal continued to come from most of the businessmen assembled for the hearing.

William A. Hollingsworth, code authority chairman for the retail tobacco trade, said price fixing had benefited the little business man in his line.

Representing more than 100,000 retail tobacco stores, Hollingsworth said claims that price fixing was impractical and unenforceable did not apply to the tobacco trade. He said almost complete compliance with code provisions had been obtained.

The only tobacco product to show a production decline last year, Hollingsworth said, was smoking tobacco, which did not have a price law.

Smoking tobacco, he said, has become "the cut raters' football" and "the loss leader bait" in cigar stores, with prices the lowest in history and "still going down."

W. A. Harriman, NRA administrative officer said he expected the hearing to be concluded today.

Three Garage Men Wounded in Strike

Baseball Bats and Bullets Fly in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Jan. 11 (AP).—Baseball bats and bullets flew today as striking garagemen backed their cause with clubs and a garage company official retaliated with gunfire. No one was injured seriously.

When police squads arrived at the Tri-Motor Co., where 70 strikers had forced their way into the office of L. E. Baker, president, and A. F. Crounse, vice president, they found three strikers wounded by gunshots and three nursing bruises. A special officer hired by the company, Baker and Crounse were those bruised. Crounse admitted firing the shots and declared he would charge the strikers with unlawful entry.

The police were told that a few strikers attempted to persuade four mechanics at the garage to join them, and failing, returned en masse, precipitating the melee.

Independent owners elsewhere frequently have voiced complaints similar to those made by the St. Louis operators. It has been asserted there is a "gentlemen's agreement" among major producers, who also operated chains of houses, to keep independents from obtaining desirable pictures.

Robertson Put On Postal Unit

All Virginians Now Have Major Assignments in the House.

Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, beginning his second term in the House, was chosen yesterday by the Ways and Means Committee to serve on the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the Associated Press reported.

He will continue as chairman of the Committee on Wild Life Conservation, but was relieved from his assignments on immigration and naturalization, insular affairs and expenditures in executive departments.

His selection for the Post Office and Post Roads Committee gives every member of the Virginia delegation a place on what are classified as "exclusive" committees.

In reorganizing the post office body, ways and means placed Robertson at the head of the list of new members, giving him tenth rank on a committee of 24 members. Representative Bureh (Democrat), Virginia, who is serving his third term, is the fifth ranking member of the committee.

CCC Continuance Urged in Congress

Sen. Walsh and Rep. Darden Join in Bill.

Representative Darden, of Norfolk, Va., has prepared for introduction in the House his proposal for continuing the Civilian Conservation Corps for another two years, according to the Associated Press. A similar measure has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts. The measures are identical and were prepared with the assistance of Robert Fechner, CCC director.

The Darden-Walsh bill would amend the original CCC bill so as to continue the CCC at its present size of 365,000 men for two years from March 31, 1935. It also would authorize the President to spend up to $300,000,000 on conservation work during the biennium.

They All Pay!

City-Owned Utilities Report Bad Bills Few.

Danville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Losses through bad accounts are shown to have been almost negligible last year in the city-owned utilities—gas, water and electric. They amounted to .06 per cent of the total sum collected.

The three utilities took in $738,931.19 and charged off $440.76 in the form of bad accounts.

A city ordinance enables the manager of utilities to suspend any or all of the three services when bills remain unpaid after 10 days.

Richmond Scores Scholarship Plan

Student Paper Protests Rhodes Board Set-up.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Richmond Collegian, weekly publication of the student body of the University of Richmond, in an editorial today, questions the wisdom of having the Virginia Rhodes Scholarship Board composed entirely of graduates from any one school.

The editorial is based around the fact that Fillmore H. Sanford, a student of the University of Richmond, was unsuccessful in efforts to win State honors in the selections which were made here last week. The editorial, in part, says:

"The situation seems even more pronounced this year, when the State board is made up entirely of graduates of the University of Virginia. As an editorial in the Petersburg Progress-Index points out, the 16 men who applied who were not students of the University of Virginia exhibited considerable courage."

About Manhattan

New York, Jan. 11.

MAX BAER may appear here in a play—a comedy about a palooka who goes into the gentleman business . . . Depression note: A strong man in an East Fourteenth street sideshow tells the customers he can tear two decks of cards at once but he can't afford to buy cards any more . . . Odd tale reaches my ears about the present opera season in Mr. Insull's costly temple in Chicago. The chief backer is the bank holding the mortgages and things, and it is putting up in order to save money! The trick is this: With opera running, the big plant can be classed as an educational institution, and as such gets a great reduction in tax assessments . . . Another backer, who once put up $1,000,000 for one season, kicked in $3,000 this year . . . Further note on "How to Save Money": Lot of these millionaires' South Sea Islands cruises of "research" and "exploration" are a legitimate tax dodge, contributions to scientific expeditions being exempt, like charity donations.

Fantastic illustration of just how crazy this town is, and maybe the country, too, is about the political big shot who liked to frequent a certain night club, and when he got tight there he liked to play the drums. The orchestra leaders suffered his interference because of his power.

But one night a different orchestra was engaged. The stewed politico made his usual dash for the tympani and was told by the new leader, who didn't know who he was, to get the hell out of there. Burning, the amateur drummer swore revenge—and the next day a potent local politician told the night club proprietor this guy's drumming habits would have to be humored, or else. And he was humored thenceforth.

COMING to Broadway next week is a play called "Little Shot," by a man named Percival Wilde, who is by way of being a paradox. The last play of Wilde's to reach Broadway was produced 15 years ago. It was "First Is Last," in collaboration with Samuel Shipman, and it had an all-star cast without knowing it—Hassard Sort, Richard Dix, Edward G. Robinson, Phoebe Foster and Kathleen Comegys.

Well, this author who hasn't been around for fifteen years is probably the world's most frequently produced living playwright. His dramas average 2,000 performances a year. They are one-acters for little theaters.

His most popular drama is "The Finger of God," which has been done 5,000 times in the last 20 years. In 1924 the Pictorial Review printed his "The Enchanted Christmas Tree" in its December issue, and during that month 284 different organizations performed it.

About 2,000 different clubs and little theaters in 1,800 different communities—including places in India and Egypt—have produced Wilde's plays. New York State leads with 148 cities and towns. Wilde has a big map with red dots on every place one of his works has been given.

WILDE began as a banker, then as a short story writer. Finally a vaudeville producer persuaded him to dramatize one of his yarns and that started him in the skit business.

But vaudeville wearied him, so he wrote ten playlets without regard for their worth to vaudeville. No producer would take them, but Henry Holt, the publisher, did, because by the terms of the firm's charter it had to print two books a year that had literary merit but no commercial value.

Holt guessed badly. "Dawn and Other Plays" sold amazingly.

Wilde prefers one-acters to anything else, but sometimes he has to try for some quick money with a scenario or a full-length play. But he gets a nice income from the amateurs, running from $3 to $50 a performance and averaging $15 or $20.

Rebate Demanded On Phone Charges

Party-Line Subscribre Asks Aid of P. U. C.

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Rockville Telephone Co. was ordered by the Public Service Commission today to explain why it charged Mrs. Pauline H. Elms, of Kensington, Md., 36 cents more a month than it did either of other two subscribers on her party line.

Mrs. Elms wrote the commission that she has paid $2.58 a month for telephone service on a three-party line whereas the other two users paid $2 a month. She asked that the company reimburse her 36 cents a month for the past 12 years.

The commission informed Mrs. Elms that a decision will be made after both sides of the case have been heard.

Dublin Fare.

The visit to Washington of the Abbey Theatre Players should not pass without a word of something more than conventional or professional appreciation.

It is certainly more than coincidence that the renaissance of the American theater should date from the period, from 1911 to 1914, when these Irish actors first toured the United States. Explicit examples of their influence on the American stage are to be found in the little theaters which sprang up in our cities following this early demonstration of the simple effectiveness of the realistic approach. Chief among such theaters, of course, were the Toy Theater in Boston, the Philadelphia Theater, Maurice Brown's experiment in Chicago and similar ones in Detroit, St. Louis and elsewhere. Nor should we omit the Washington Square Players, of New York, the acknowledged progenitors of the present Theater Guild.

From the little building on Abbey street, in Dublin, with its stage measuring but 16 feet deep and 19 feet wide, has sprung a new dramatic technique, the influence of which today permeates the atmosphere of contemporary drama. The contribution of Ireland to this realm of art is summarized in the work of W. B. Yeats, Lady Gregory, J. M. Synge, Sean O'Casey, all intimately associated with the Abbey Theatre, while George Moore, "A. E.," and Lord Dunsany are only slightly less closely identified with it.

From veterans such as Maureen Delany and Michael Dolan to bright Frolie Mulhern and young William O'Gorman, the players are universally acknowledged to be among the most outstanding of the English-speaking stage. The company's playwright director, Mr. Lennox Robinson, says: "Our recipe for national theater could only have been cooked over an Irish fire."

Irish fire or no, the proof of the pudding lies in the eating, and the sustained international demand for the Dublin company's fare is testimony to its universal wholesomeness.

A Gallant Little Band.

The cause of liberty has been advanced in the sum of $95,062. According to a statement filed with the House of Representatives, the American Liberty League ordered the disbursement of this amount from its treasury up to December 31, last.

Far back in August, when the league was first announced, it was described as a nonpartisan organization which would "gather and disseminate information that (1) will teach the necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property . . . and (2) will teach the duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group enterprise, etc. . . ."

It was to be composed of divisions of home owners, farmers, laborers, savings depositors, life insurance policyholders, bondholders and stockholders. "It will become," said its president, "a real factor in assisting toward recovery and the restoration of prosperous conditions."

It now appears that less than 100 individuals have contributed amounts ranging from $100 to $5,000 to further these ends. There is something dramatic about this gallant little band, knowing not what course others may take, but striking out against a sea of unconstitutional troubles to reach the Delectable Isles of security.

But to the average American the record of the league would be more inspiring if it could show that its appeal is not confined to those whose interest in teaching respect for the rights of property is fairly obvious.

In The Shade Of The Palm.

Sophisticated special correspondents at the Hauptmann trial are loftily amused by a palm-leaf fan on the bench. They think it bears some relation to the fact that the courtroom temperature rises to 86 before a session's end. So they wonder why electric air-agitators should not be considered good enough for a hall of justice.

All that is the sophistication which amounts to ignorance. Although the palm-leaf fan has disappeared from our cities, in many a minor community it still retains its special and historic significance.

Time was when all American small-town men carried palm-leaf fans between May and September; the silken confections were for the ladies; the palm leaf was a masculine perquisite. Saloonkeepers kept palm leaves on barroom tables; the benches of courts—from that of the squire to that of Oyer and Terminer—were always supplied. The fancy-waistcoated district attorney, the shirt-sleeved lawyer for the defense, the collarless jury and the unhappy prisoner, all swayed palm leaves in unison with his honor, the judge.

But the advance of electricity changed all that. First it brought great wings, like the propellers of the unborn airplane, which whirled from the ceiling. Then came the contrivance still in vogue. The palm-leaf fan was blown out of every hand except the hand judicial—yet there it is cherished.

How else, indeed, are you to recognize a rural praetor? Local prejudice forbids him the toga. Any chairman of any meeting must wield a gavel. The palm-leaf fan survives as the distinctive badge of the bucolic bench.

Conflicts Of Policy.

The National Grange has issued a warning against "the danger lurking in several of the pending trade agreements with foreign nations, where potential concessions offered by other countries have a dubious if not fictitious value as compared with the sacrifices which they would entail to the American producer." Since the necessity of finding larger outlets for surplus farm products is one of the major objectives of reciprocal tariff negotiations, the emphasis which the Grange statement places upon protection of the home market seems somewhat surprising.

Concessions to foreign countries that might deprive American workers of employment would, it is said, reduce domestic purchasing power and thereby in the end do more harm than good to agriculture. Thus, it is argued that tariff reductions designed to increase sales of Swiss watches in the United States would be detrimental to rural districts now benefited by the pay roll disbursements of American watch factories. Obviously, a material lowering of import duties would be impossible if domestic industries were promised complete immunity from the disturbing effects of increased sales of competing foreign products.

The Grange apparently indorses the Peek conception of reciprocal tariff agreements as an outcome of bilateral bargaining designed to obtain for us as much as possible in return for minimum concessions. The State Department's endeavor to make individual trade treaties a point of departure for a general lowering of tariff barriers is diametrically opposed to this barter conception of Mr. Peek and the National Grange. It would do no good, and might do considerable harm, to grant liberal tariff concessions in exchange for meager direct advantages. But it is equally evident that the narrow policy of always demanding maximum concessions tends to strangle foreign trade, and therefore increases the difficulties of other countries in paying for the commodities that the United States wishes to sell.

The Grange does, however, make a telling point in calling attention to the inconsistency of efforts to expand our foreign trade at a time when new obstacles are being opposed to such expansion. Production costs have already been raised sharply under the NRA program. If plans to introduce a 30-hour week without reduction of pay should materialize, further additions to unit costs would result. Under such circumstances, there is increasing resistance to efforts to lower tariff barriers. At the same time, efforts to revive our export trade are hampered by the AAA restriction program, which has raised the prices of farm products such as cotton to a point which encourages the use of foreign growths.

Unless a halt is called to nationalistic policies that tend to isolate us from the rest of the world, the State and Commerce Departments obviously can not hope to make much headway in their efforts to expand our foreign trade. America must, as Secretary Wallace says, make a choice between excessive nationalism and a moderate internationalism. Unfortunately, the Administration itself too often refuses to recognize the necessity of that choice and tries to reconcile irreconcilable policies.

The Decree Absolute.

"America's Sweetheart" has won her divorce, obtaining the decree in three minutes. On March 28, 1920, Mary Pickford said "yes" once and became Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks. On January 10, 1935, Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks said "yes" six times, and became Mary Pickford again.

Thus a headline marriage becomes a headline divorce. Perhaps Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks tried too hard to be happy. They were excessively determined to make a success of what they knew had been called "Hollywood's Most Successful Marriage." They made a fetish of being in love, even refusing to dance with any one but each other.

No one will deny that there was love at Pickfair. But it was a love continually on dress parade. The master and mistress of the $500,000 estate were in the spotlight, not only to prove their devotion to each other, but to the world at large. Now they are seeking a separate happiness on different continents.

Wisely, Mary Pickford has sought and apparently found a certain anodyne in radio contracts, writing and personal appearances on the stage. Douglas Fairbanks continues to pursue happiness in play, sports and travel. But it takes more than mere energy to catch the bluebird.

Excellent Strategy.

Several important measures are included in the list of nine District bills passed by the Senate during the first week of the current session. Even more important, however, is the precedent which Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, has inaugurated in handling local legislation.

There is always a tendency on Capitol Hill to neglect local bills. Congress has never taken very seriously its role as city council for Washington. It is true that efforts have been made to set aside special days for the consideration of District bills. But in actual practice this arrangement has been persistently upset. Moreover, Congressmen who make a practice of frustrating legislation advantageous to the Capital City find that it is easy to "talk a bill to death" on a "District day." As a result of these combined tendencies consideration of local measures is too often postponed until late in the session, when action is precluded by the pressure of major national legislation.

By engineering nine local bills into a preferred place on the calendar, Senator King and his colleagues on the District Committee were able to secure their passage through the Senate, without opposition, while the Administration's program is still in the formative stage. Such tactics deserve emulation on the House side. Fortunately, there are indications that Representative Norton will likewise take the first opportunity to seek action on bills pending before her committee. Discussion of these measures before the House becomes completely engrossed with national issues would be much appreciated by District citizens.

Acute traffic and crime problems, in which Congressmen can scarcely fail to be interested, fully justify preferential listing by the House of the most important bills which the Senate has passed. The so-called safety responsibility bill would give authorities an important new weapon in their campaign to eliminate reckless and unscrupulous motorists from the streets. A more rigid anti-gambling act is no less necessary to extend police control over the sources of crime. Even aside from these considerations, the desirability of establishing a precedent for early discussion of local bills would justify a special drive to focus attention of the House upon such measures during the next few weeks.

Much Ado About Sugar.

Legislators from the beet sugar producing States seem to be unduly alarmed over an alleged "squeeze" in the sugar market during the last days of 1934. Senator Vandenberg raises a question as to whether "the Jones-Costigan act has not unwittingly encouraged market manipulation inimical to the people of the United States." Representative Crawford, also of Michigan, asserts that Cuba has "virtually a monopoly in sugar" under the quota system inaugurated last year as part of the Administration's rehabilitation program for the insular republic.

A "squeeze" or "corner" is usually associated with artificial price raising and exploitation of the consumer. In this case the price of sugar remained stable, even though the quotas of insular possessions as well as the domestic sugar crop had been virtually exhausted. For a short period before the 1935 quotas came into effect, Cuba was in a strategic position to control the United States sugar market. But her actions seem to have been confined to a price-pegging arrangement designed to avoid sharp fluctuations.

There appears to be no evidence that this action was disadvantageous to American producers or consumers. Officials anticipated a sudden dumping of sugar on the market as soon as the 1935 quotas became available, and, fearing disastrous consequences, agreed to uphold prices until the new supply of sugar could be made available. The maintenance of stable prices ought to be considered an asset to domestic producers, and it is difficult to see how the long-range interests of consumers have been impaired.

If sugar quotas were irrevocably fixed, Cuba could easily control the price at which American consumers could satisfy their appetites for sweets. By threatening to hold back sugar exports, Cuba could create a shortage and name the figure at which she would sell. But it is absurd to suppose that manipulation of this sort will be attempted so long as the Secretary of Agriculture can raise or lower the quota allowed Cuba. Good faith on the part of the Cubans is absolutely essential to maintenance of their quota.

Aside from the official action in this case, however, there are indications that speculators attempted to corner the sugar market. If Senator Vandenberg's resolution, asking Secretary Wallace to furnish all available information on the incident, is aimed at private traders who are trying to distort the quota arrangement to their own advantage, its adoption is fully justified. The danger in such a move, of course, is that it may be twisted into agitation for repeal of the measures which are evidently assisting the economic revival, and therefore the political stabilization, of Cuba.

Oh, Mr. Farley: How about having the Postoffice Department place "Post no bills" signs on all mail boxes?

Bank Changes in France.

(From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.)

Though the replacement of Clement Moret by Jean Tannery as governor of the Bank of France is variously interpreted as an "inflationary move," speculators on exchange would be rash to gamble on any immediate extensive depreciation of the franc.

Former Governor Moret is described as a "strong defender of the franc and the bank's independence." That is accurate. But Jean Tannery has been head of the autonomous sinking fund created by the late Raymond Poincaire to stabilize the franc after the depreciation of 1926-1928. He, too, is a defender of the franc, and his sinking fund has been even more independent than the bank of political control.

Credit may be expanded, as official announcements say it will be, but if the franc leaves the gold standard it will probably be in spite of, rather than because of, any action of the new bank governor.

Invitation To Georgia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Clearly, the ravings of "Jason's Golden Fleece" and "The Rape of the Lock" must have lost face on the scroll of immortals among the bold deeds since the recent theft of those rod tips from the top of the Washington Monument, if the report is authentic.

This challenge to courage roiled Southerners, who, like all the brave, resent being surpassed in bravery. Even the treetops down here in the piney woods are threshing about in what is doubtless a storm of patriotic indignation over the iconoclastic vandalizing of that sacred edifice.

It may have been just some heart of oak who wished to show the Nation-wide police coordination plan to what heights it must go to clean up—a loose range demonstration being a mere fraction of a parasang from the world's highest-powered detective organization outside Scotland Yard.

The implications are alarming! What about the safety of that billion dollars in the Treasury vault, already wrapped up in rouleaus for easy distribution via the FERA? So much easier, too, of access than were those platinum tips—"fingers of ice" pointing in an opposite direction and to a far different goal from the ultimate destination of that bold, buccaneering knight-errant. Atlanta, quasi second capital, would welcome the hero for an extended visit.

GEORGE E. GARY.

A Lost Opportunity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the issue of The Washington Post of January 5 appears a press report entitled "Scouts Snub Youth Units, D. C. Meeting." The report appears to be built upon purported interviews with leaders of the Boy Scout movement in reference to the so-called "National Youth Congress" recently convened in Washington.

It is wonderful that ever so often you can pick up a wholesome indication, even in the press, that every one is not sound asleep. If Mr. Drake really has any doubts as to what the "National Youth Congress" represents, they could easily be removed. Anything that merits the attention of Norman Thomas should be amply sufficient.

The writer, however, looked in vain for the usual Washington Post editorial. Is the "red flag waver" of the editorial staff away on a vacation or something?

BART B. PIGMAN.

Washington, Jan. 5.

Baker And Bargeron.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There are two daily features in The Post which, to my mind are outstanding, and which I never miss: (1) "The Federal Diary," by Morgan Baker, and (2) "Along the Potomac," by Carlisle Bargeron.

Baker, I believe, has more acquaintances—and friends—among the Government workers in Washington than any other one newspaperman here. The stuff in his column is newsy, up-to-date, and much of it is "inside stuff." He does not take advantage of the power he holds and doesn't "crack down" on anyone needlessly.

Bargeron's column strips the disguise from a lot of Government men, too, whose heads have swelled all out of proportion since they, through some political "jerk," or something, have managed to land in important places. He has held the mirror up to such folks in such a way that they are beginning to see themselves as others see them and as they really are. And, as a result, Bargeron is letting a lot of gas out of their heads. He is proving to be a better representative, for a lot of Government workers, than the duly elected representatives have themselves, fighting their battles for them with the weapons of ridicule and publicity. There are a lot of so-called "big guys" in the Government service who hesitate about pulling anything unfair because they are afraid Bargeron will "give them the works."

More power to these two real newspapermen. May their type become more plentiful. They are real representatives of the New Deal.

A. L. DUNN.

Better Pasturage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In consideration that 1934's loss in live stock, due entirely to the lack of water, both to produce pasturage and to drink, would pay for the drilling of a thousand wells in the arid sections of the cattle country, I should like to make a suggestion that such an activity be added to the Federal reemployment project just outlined by the President in his speech to Congress.

In the oil-field sections of Texas, Oklahoma, Wyoming and other "cow States," there are acres of stored drilling equipment that would almost be given to the Government should it elect to drill water wells on the bench lands and mesas to be operated in the emergency of drought, or for constant operation to produce better pasturage where it otherwise will not grow.

Reforestation is well and good, and in a measure should be encouraged both nationally and personally, but it must be agreed that it isn't fair to ask a hungry cow to wait until a forest grows to bring rainwater to grow grass for her to eat and furnish her with drinking water.

And, joking aside, if we are to raise our own beef, mutton and what not, plans must be made to get at the water under the earth, and less hope put in moisture above it.

WILLIAM MEYERS.

Washington, Jan. 5.

Retrogressive Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

They say that this is an age of retrogression, and it must be so if the statement is true that 15,000,000 signatures have been obtained to a petition in favor of the Townsend Old Age Pension Bill. Personally I think no further proof is necessary.

These 15,000,000 (and let us hope that they are not representative citizens of this country) have evidently given no thought to the fact that we are now unable to balance the budget by about $2,000,000,000 not to mention paying a prospective public debt of $34,000,000,000, on which the annual interest will amount to from $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000, which will be added to the normal annual expenses of the government.

Under these conditions it is difficult to see by what process of reasoning we can be expected to raise enough revenue to give every person over 60 years of age a pension of $200 per month. And Heaven knows the writer would be only too glad to get it, considering his present limited income.

It does not take much of a psychologist to visualize what an abnormal condition would be created by such an orgy of spending. I wonder how long they think that could be kept up. And do these brilliant psychologists imagine that such a fairy-like dream would not have been suggested many years ago if it had the least semblance of being practical?

How England Was Civilized.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

One who signs himself "Anglo-Saxon" in your issue of January 10 indulges rather futilely in the age-old arguments of those who refuse to see. He says that President De Valera forces (sic) Ireland to speak Gaelic.

Here are the facts: The revival of the Gaelic tongue, a language as old as Sanscrit and more beautiful by far than English, is not new. German scholars like Kuno Meyer have been waging a fight for the revival of this ancient culture for years. Harvard University has also emphasized it and has even a chair of Gaelic among its professorships.

Mr. De Valera is merely wiser than most statesmen in thus adding to the modern learning of Ireland the ancient culture that astounded all Europe. If it had not been for the study of Gaelic by continental scholars, it would still probably be unknown that Ireland civilized and Christianized England, built England's schools, taught the English to read and write, to build, to work in metals, to illuminate books and manuscripts. English scholars tell us that all the culture early England knew was derived from Gaelic Ireland.

I could inform "Anglo-Saxon" much more at length on these points, but here in this city he can find the Congressional Library. Let him read and learn.

WILLIAM HAWKINS.

Washington, Jan. 10.

In Wonderland.

Alice was getting perplexed at the Queen of Hearts. "No matter how hard I try," said she, "I still can not understand the Townsend plan and I really wish you wouldn't look at me so crossly."

"Well, stupid, I will start over again," said the Queen fiercely. "There are 10,000,000 persons over 60 in the country and we are going to give them each $200 a month or $2,400 a year."

"But that," said Alice, making a quick calculation on her slate, "is $24,000,000,000, or almost as much as the national debt."

"What does that matter?" shouted the Queen. "Didn't Dr. Townsend say that it is only about 2 per cent of our bank clearings in 1929, which amounted to $1,250,000,000,000?"

"My gracious!" sighed Alice. "In my school they do not teach us to think in trillions. And, besides, I don't know what bank clearings have to do with it. What are bank clearings, Your Majesty?"

"Well, bank clearings are—but I don't see much use in trying to teach you anything, Alice. You are too stubborn."

"Perhaps," faltered Alice, "Dr. Townsend himself could make me understand."

"That's impossible," said the Queen with great definiteness. "Dr. Townsend is in Washington now, establishing a branch office of Wonderland."

"Ho, hum," said Alice. "My head aches awfully. I wonder if we can't have tea."

"Of course, my dear," said the Queen, abstractedly, "trillions and trillions of tea."

The Post Impressionist

Post Office, Saturday.

THEY want yet another American woman-spy.

Of course they would! Intellectually united—let us hope—we Americans are still emotionally sectional; you remember O. Henry's internationalist who assaulted another internationalist because the latter intimated that his native small-town was better than the former's. Thus, just because this Column said a few words about brave Belle Boyd, of the Confederacy, there comes injured inquiry as to whether the Northern Armies didn't also have women-spies.

Well, they did. And one of their bravest and most resourceful had a name as alliterative as Belle Boyd's: to wit, Emma Edmonds. And the scene of one of her cleverest exploits was not far from Washington.

She was Canadian-born. Indeed, she arrived in New York only when the news of Sumter's fall arrived. But she had strong abolitionist sympathies and, ten days later, was enrolled as field nurse here at our Capital City.

She was a good nurse until, shortly after the first battle of Bull Run, a patient from the Thirty-seventh New York Regiment told her how one of his comrades, a Federal spy, had been detected and executed. Emma immediately applied for permission to replace him. After long cross-examinations, her offer was accepted.

Don't ask us how a woman fresh from Canada ever managed to deceive Southern white men and Negroes into believing her a Negro workman. All we know is that her biographers say she succeeded.

She bought a suit of clothes from a runaway slave. She had her hair shaved. She dyed her whole head, her arms and feet.

Then, afoot and sleeping over one night blanketless on the bare ground, she somehow got through the lines.

Unseen by any suspecting outpost, she reached a party of Negroes carrying coffee to Confederate pickets and persuaded them to let her help. But their real job was fortification construction; they were soon set to work with pick and shovel.

By the end of the first day's labor her hands were blistered, her back threatened to break. Nevertheless, she had a bit of time to herself. She contrived to draw up a report of the sector's mounted guns, to sketch all that part of the line, and she hid her papers under the inner sole of her rough boots before she lay down to sleep in the construction gang's quarters.

There were still some unemployed Negroes in this neighborhood. One of them, Emma bribed to substitute for her, next morning, among the pick-and-shovel men.

A tented council-of-war took place at the spot where this brigade was stationed. Emma, pretending to fall asleep, behind the tent, listened much before being routed out as a lazy servant. Among other things, she heard—by peeping under the canvas, she seems even to have seen—a man whom she recognized as a Washington street-peddler, but who was just then giving the Confederate commanders a map and a full description of McClellan's position.

Emma called that a day.

On the following evening, her chance to get away appeared to arrive. She was sent with a party of Negroes to carry supper to the outermost pickets. She had secured a canteen of whisky, and this, with the corncakes, she began to distribute liberally among those scattered lookouts each posted behind a tree which partially protected him from the fire of the Federal outposts scarcely a mile away.

* * *

But again an officer observed her. He was short one man.

"Give that fellow a rifle," he ordered, "and let him take this tree."

It was a tree whereat a picket had just been shot.

The place wasn't pleasant. Moreover, the whisky had been insufficient in either quantity or quality—yes, even at that pre-Prohibition date!—to produce the uncertain aim she had hoped to produce. Her temporary comrades-in-arms were exhibiting excellent markmanship. However, Emma held on until the moon set.

* * *

Then she just couldn't wait any longer. She "made a run for it"—and the run made good. By morning, McClellan knew a lot more about the enemy's position than he had known before. He even knew that the enemy knew a lot about his own position. So he "acted accordingly."

What happened to that Washington street-peddler when he reentered this city is not upon the records. But what happened to Emma is there and would make a book.

She entered the Confederate lines 11 times in all. When she wasn't disguised as a Negro, it was as an Irish woman, selling apples—brogue and all.

And she was never caught.

Evidently, Emma was born too early to make the most of her talents. She was born before the motion picture.

New York Sifts Out Theater For Season

(Special Correspondence of The Post).

New York.

THE show is over in the big tent on Broadway and the tom-toms have begun to beat for the little season. Producers are closing out their sourer items and nine shows folded up over the week-end. But newcomers are pressing for a verdict at the bar of public opinion and New York's seventy odd legitimate theaters seem about as busy as ever. Not all of them, of course, are occupied by legitimate shows, simply because playwrights can't think that fast.

There was a good deal of vitality in the seasonal offerings last year, a better-than-average crop of hits. While the harvest wasn't as fruitful as it was expected to be in the fall a number of the impresarios have laid aside quite a bit of important money. If a show makes a noise nowadays, when the movies are scraping the bottom of the barrel for material, rich sources of income can be tapped quite outside of the box office.

"Page Miss Glory," for example, which is a natural for film transcription, pried $72,500 out of Warner Brothers. Besides, they wanted a vehicle for Marion Davies. "The Farmer Takes a Wife," Frank Elser's engaging dramatization of the Erie Canal, which kicked around the provinces for four years until Marc Connelly whipped a Broadway success out of it, goes into the movies at $85,000 and shows no abatement at the ticket window. And speaking of continuous success, "The Green Pastures," which Connelly dramatized from Roark Bradford's Negro Bible stories, is reorganizing its original company preparatory to starting a fifth year on the road. That is equivalent, in the theater, to immortality, which is the subject matter of the play.

The little season began auspiciously with "The Petrified Forest" with Leslie Howard, as some of the critics slyly surmised, in the title role. Bob Sherwood, the author, who years ago used to edit Life, is a veteran playwright now and can be depended on for sure-fire theater. The play, a kind of streamlined "Arizona" with an 8-cylinder plot and a philosophical chassis, is certain to be bid in by Hollywood.

WHATEVER may be your opinion of Noel Coward as a great dramatist, Broadway's first nighters are certainly all agog over his "Point Valaine," which opens next week. Noel has a distinct flair for making people talk and he does it this time by the simple expedient of having the hero-villain spit in the heroine's face. As it happens it is Alfred Lunt spitting in the face of Lynn Fontanne, so it may be said to be all in the family. Nevertheless there is bound to be a lot of discussion along the line that "It's pretty, but is it Art?" However, it is all laid on one of those tropical islands where men are male and women are frail, which tends to provide shock absorbers. Osgood Perkins plays the role of an author which, advance notices suggest, is Noel Coward's portrait of Noel Coward.

There is a bit of mystery about "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles," the latest George Bernard Shaw drama, which the Theater Guild has just received and is putting immediately into production. Nobody knows what it is about so all one can do is to scan the title and wonder if that, too, is autobiographical. The Theater Guild is now safely past its thirteenth Shaw play. "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles" will be the fourteenth.

* * * *

"MINOR MIRACLE" had its day, and a very good day, too, on Broadway, but the big miracle of the theatrical district is "anything goes." Nothing could illustrate the vicissitudes of the theater better than its brief but profitable history.

The producer, Vinton Freedley, planned his venture carefully enough. P. G. Wodehouse undertook the book and on the strength of his reputation Freedley had his scenery painted and gathered a cast, including Ethel Merman, William Gaxton and Victor Moore, which stood him in about $6,500 a week. The composer was also ready with his score at the cost of some more thousands.

The book arrived from London on the day the Morro Castle burned. It was all about a disaster at sea and was supposed to be funny. "Good night," "Curtains" or anything you like! Mr. Wodehouse and his amusing story of a disaster at sea went suddenly out of the figurative window.

To coin a phrase, Howard Dietz was hurriedly summoned. He, in turn, got hold of Russell ("Bucky") Crouse, of the Theater Guild entourage. They took a look at the scenery, listened to the score, joshed a few minutes with the principals and then executed a graceful swan dive into a new story.

For a while no bubbles came up, for they slept a little in the daytime and worked all night. Six days before the show opened in Boston they had their first act out of the way and had a faint glimmer of what the second was going to be about. Then they gave up sleeping in the daytime.

But the show opened on schedule. After the first performance in the City of Beans seven New York managers fought hysterically for the privilege of housing the hit. In the metropolis it has been a musical tin panic and a box-office wow. Try and get tickets.

* * * *

BY this time everyone knows that it costs a lot of money and takes a couple of years' planning to introduce a young girl into New York society. Pulling the proper strings would put many a mama into a padded cell and the coming out party alone would beggar a papa in moderate circumstances.

It now develops that the eligible bachelors who attend these affairs have their price, too, though they don't get it. Each fall before the debutante season opens (one almost writes "the open season for debutantes") they receive little white questionnaire cards from the inright social secretaries. They are requested to give their full names, their nicknames and their telephone numbers, and most of them do.

They are then graded, like apples, according to their social standing and separated into three lists. The first list costs debbie's mama $500, the second $300 and the third $150. There are some people, naturally, who don't have to bother about these lists, but not so many as you might think. Coming out is largely a question of coming through.

* * * *

Starlings, as all Washington knows, may be a nuisance, but squirrels can wear their welcome out, too. Mrs. Elizabeth Mandell, who owns the old colonial house in Far Rockaway which used to belong to Russell Sage, has appealed to the New York State Conservation Commission to rid her home of the little gray pest on the roof.

They have gnawed through the roof into the attic. That wouldn't be so bad if they hadn't come down stairs and eaten up her Persian rugs. And that wouldn't be so bad, if they hadn't gobbled up the cake she baked for her husband and chewed holes in the tablecloth. And that wouldn't be so bad, if they didn't frighten the terrier, well-named "Baby." And that wouldn't be so bad if one of them, only a week ago, hadn't walked right down her neck.

But Mrs. Mandell flatly objects to squirrels walking down her neck and says something has got to be done about it. She points out that the United States Government has just purchased the Bixby Nut Arboretum at Baldwin, Long Island, and wonders if her unwelcome guests couldn't somehow be lured down there.

The austere exclusiveness of Gramercy Park is surrounded by a high iron fence and iron gates to which only the property owners facing its four sides have keys. The Players, founded by Edwin Booth, and frequented by actors, artists and writers, faces the park and owns a key.

Some of the club members who aren't doing so well as in the years of the great prosperity were figuring the other day how, when their resources were entirely exhausted, they could avoid the proletarian benches of Union Square. They just plan to borrow the Players' key and sit together in Gramercy Park.

Marshall Resigns As Times Publisher

Will Devote Time to Other Business Activities.

George Preston Marshall announced yesterday that he had resigned as publisher of the Washington Times. He accepted the post a year ago, he said, believing it would not interfere with his other business activities.

"Since then," he said, "a great many changes have taken place in Washington. The restoration of Federal pay, in which we were all so vitally interested, has brought on a prosperity which has required a greater amount of my time outside the paper."

Mr. Marshall is owner of the Palace Laundry Dry Cleaning Co. and he also controls the Boston Redskins, a professional football team.

Appeal Made for Aid On R. E. Lee Memorial

The ladies of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation and the national sponsors of the dedication of Stratford Hall, ancestral home of the Lees and birthplace of the Confederate leader, yesterday appealed for further gifts toward the balance of $53,500 due as the purchase price of the mansion.

All admirers of the officer who led the armies of the South in the War Between the States have been asked to give what they can toward the fund. George Gordon Battle is honorary national chairman of sponsors for the dedication, and Garland Powell Peed, is active chairman of sponsors.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Lazy Fare.

EVERY now and then it is brought vividly to our attention how some woman has played a prominent part in our history. The early lore of the Black Hills of South Dakota, for example, is closely woven around the life of Calamity Jane.

BARGERON.

And certainly the history of the pioneer days of the New Deal cannot be written without the story of Lazy Fare, a notorious woman of the Paris demi-monde whom the economists brought here. A habitue of the Parisian cafes, a gaudily dressed sister if ever there was one, with diamonds on her fingers and bells on her toes, she was known over there as Laissez Faire. Over here we soon got to calling her Lazy Fare. She knifed us one night because we wished she were white and we learned about women from her.

* * * *

Rex Tugwell is generally credited with bringing her here. The story is that he was browsing in the Latin Quarter of Paris one afternoon and became fascinated with her. But after she got here she was a friend of them all, all of the economists. They will never be able, either, to repay their debt to her. She supported this gay young crowd of students for two years until they could get deeply intrenched in the Government. It is fine commentary of the gratitude of men that now they feel secure they seldom mention her. One doesn't see her around, as a matter of fact.

She was their stock and trade in the early days, though.

* * * *

It was with her that they beat the Congress into submission, the Administration, the whole country. Every time some one on Capitol Hill would raise his voice in protest against what the economists were doing they would say: "Well, do you want Lazy Fare?"

The very suggestion of her would cause chills to run up and down the Congressmen's and Senators' spines. Most of them represent hinterland constituencies, people who look generally with disfavor upon the goings-on in the big cities. For the word to go back home that a rural Congressman or Senator was associating with the notorious Lazy Fare would be his political end. He would be thrown out of the church.

* * * *

Thus it was that she came to wield a club over national affairs. Talk about the sirens who are supposed to have influenced our statesmen, none of them was a candlestick as compared with Lazy Fare. Gosh, this writer can recall just as well as he is sitting here how Senator Ellison (Cotton Ed) Smith turned blue in the face when it was once suggested to him that he was interested in Lazy Fare. Why, he had heard only vaguely of the woman, he expostulated.

Ah, those were gay days, though, for the economists. Everywhere they went Lazy Fare was with them, dressed as only a woman of her kind would dress. They kept her always on parade as a threat to anyone who opposed them.

"You want her," they would say and the statesmen would beat a disorderly retreat.

One would think that vain woman she was, she would have felt hurt at the offer of the economists to give her away. But she knew it was a trick. She knew they had to flaunt her to keep their jobs.

Just as sure as there is justice in the world there will be a commemorative marker of Lazy Fare some day just as there is of Calamity Jane in the Black Hills. It ought to be a tableau of chorus boys, the economists facing northeast, their left feet forward and raised and doffing straw hats, with Lazy in the center singing:

"This is the day we give dollars away with a half of pound of tea—kick!" Not that the song particularly means anything but it expresses the rythmn.

Leather-Bound Books Deteriorate in City

Industrial Acids Cause Ruin To Fabric; Government Seeks Preventive Methods To Save Volumes.

Pittsburgh readers probably shouldn't buy books with leather bindings. At least, before they do they should run over and see the Department of Agriculture. This is, by no means, a reflection on the literacy of Pittsburgh, because what goes for leather bindings in Pittsburgh also applies to New York and Kansas City. What happens to leather bindings in any industrial city, according to Dr. Fletcher P. Veitch, head of the Industrial Farm Products division of the department, is that sulphuric acid given off by coal gas gets into the leather and rots it.

In the basement and on the first floor of an old red brick department building just off Independence avenue, Dr. Veitch and his men have a wide assortment of test tubes, tensil-strength testing machines and microscopes. Here they expose samples of leather to a gas burner, which produces the effect of a blast furnace.

There's not very much to do about sulphuric acid in leather once the hide has been exposed to it, except, perhaps, to apply some sort of counteractive alkali, which isn't a certain remedy. But for leather for new book bindings the department has taught manufacturers how to use certain alkali tanning properties and to coat the finished product with a cellulose solution.

Lack of atmospheric moisture is almost as hard on leather bindings as sulphuric acid. The department advises regular though not too liberal applications of certain greases as a guard against cracking because of dryness.

Tough as sulphuric acid is on leather, tougher still is the roach on the commoner forms of cloth book bindings.

For a time the department considered a number on insecticides, but gave up when they found they were endangering human life, or, at least, the lives of people who lick their thumbs when thumbing through books. It decided that a coating of cellulose, which roaches won't touch, was better.

ABC Revocation Appealed to City

Cafe Man, Cleared in Court, Loses License Anyway.

Restoration of the liquor license of Christ Pappas was asked of the District Commissioners in a formal appeal from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revocation filed with the District Commissioners yesterday.

Pappas, who conducts a restaurant at 1031 Seventh street northwest, was charged with selling drinks on Sunday. Charges against him were dismissed in Police Court but the Beverage Board subsequently revoked his license on the same charge. Board members overruled contentions of George C. Gertman, attorney for Pappas, that the Police Court action bound the board.

In his appeal to the Commissioners yesterday it was contended "the judgment of the Police Court vindicated him of the alleged violation of the law and no court or tribunal may lawfully retry the charge," and that the Beverage Board "is not above the law but subservient thereto."

The action of the board, it was charged, "was arbitrary and contrary to all settled principles of law and order and if allowed to stand unreversed it will establish a dangerous precedent and operate as a defiance of judicial action."

Ballou Mentioned As College's Head

Considered for Post at the University of Missouri.

If Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District public schools, is under consideration for the post of president of the University of Missouri, he considers it "a very great compliment."

It was learned that Dr. Ballou's name is among those who have been suggested to take the place of President Walter Williams, who resigned last spring because of ill health. Dr. Ballou declared yesterday he did not know this and had not sought the post.

The superintendent of schools recently turned down an offer to become president of St. Lawrence University at Canton, N. Y.

Bloody Battles End Paraguay Advance

Armies Totaling 50,000 Men Deadlocked.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 11 (AP).—A fortnight of bitter, bloody fighting in the northwest Chaco tonight left Paraguay's and Bolivia's biggest armies, estimated to total 50,000 to 60,000 men, apparently in another of their periodic deadlocks.

Dispatches from the warring nations indicated the stout Bolivian defenses protecting Villa Montes, major army base, and Bolivia's oil fields had stopped the smashing advance of Gen. Jose Estigarribia's veteran Paraguayans.

Although Bolivia reported its defenders had bloodily repulsed Paraguayan mass attacks on hillside defenses guarding Villa Montes and communications leading into the Tarija, Chuquisaca and Santa Cruz departments, military observers here expressed the opinion that the Paraguayan movements had been quick raids rather than mass attacks.

Son Is Born to Sister Of Duchess of Kent

Munich, Germany, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Countess of Toerring-Jettenbach, sister of the new Duchess of Kent, today gave birth to a 7-pound boy, her first child. Both mother and child were reported doing well.

The countess, who is 33, was married to Count Karl Theodore Toerring-Jettenbach of Bavaria January 10, 1934. Before her marriage she was Princess Elizabeth of Greece, and with her husband attended the marriage of her sister, Princess Marina, to the Duke of Kent last November.

Cuban Cabinet Insists Mayor of Havana Stay

Havana, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Cuban cabinet today reaffirmed its decision not to accept the resignation of Miguel Mariano Gomez, Mayor of Havana, and appointed Secretary of Justice Raul de Cardenas to negotiate between Gomez and striking physicians.

The mayor, whose discharge of three internes employed at the Emergency Hospital caused the strike, nevertheless insisted he was quitting tomorrow.

Sewall's Diary

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

IN 1927 there appeared in an attractive volume of about 240 pages, shrewdly edited and abridged by the accomplished Mark Van Doren, "Samuel Sewall's Diary." The publishers were Macy-Masius.

Samuel Sewall was born in England in 1652, came to New England at the age of nine, studied divinity at Harvard, became a clergyman, was married, had 15 children, was Chief Justice of the Superior Court, got mixed up in the witch trials (no woman was ever burned as a witch in North America) but was so sorry later for his part in the condemnation that he published a recantation and remained standing in church while it was read aloud; and he died in Boston in 1730, at the age of 78.

* * * *

We learn about religious observances, courts, politics, social life, travelling, and his own private affairs and exceedingly intimate meditations.

Mr. Van Doren has abridged the Diary with such skill that every page of this small volume is interesting. Here is reliable history, an accurate picture of the times. We do not have to trust to the modern historian, for we have the original documents.

Duce Held Cause Of Economic Ruin

Italian Socialist Exile Calls Fascist Rule Harmful.

Italy is being driven to economic disaster by the Fascist dictatorship, Giuseppe Emanuele Modigliani, Italian Socialist Party leader, said last night at Typographical Temple. The meeting was arranged under auspices of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. He declared:

"Labor unions, as they are known in this country, have been completely wiped out by the Italian Fascist regime. Workers are compelled to belong to labor organizations sponsored and controlled by the government."

The elderly Socialist, in exile from his country, said that in Italy since 1926, "industrial wages have decreased 50 per cent. Farm wages have fallen 60 per cent. The cost of living has dropped only 25 per cent. Meanwhile, business failures have averaged 14,000 a year, he asserted.

'Dawes' Bank Suit Now Is Challenged

RFC Questioned on Move by Smaller Stockholders.

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—Organizing to fight the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's $61,211,937 suit against stockholders of the "Dawes" Central Republic Trust Co., a defense committee today challenged the right of the Government to sue the smaller shareholders.

Ralph N. Ballou, committee secretary, said the question would be raised whether the United States was a proper co-plaintiff with the RFC in its suit to collect the stockholders' liability for the unpaid portion of the big loan granted the Central Republic Trust before it closed.

"If the Government is not a proper plaintiff," said Ballou, "the alleged liability of each stockholder would have to exceed $3,000," indicating this would exempt a number of "little fellows" from liability.

Press Board of NRA To Sift Jennings Case

The Recovery Administration said yesterday the newspaper industrial board would meet in New York Monday to consider the case of Dean S. Jennings, a rewrite man for the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, who said he had been forced to resign because of activity in the American Newspaper Guild, the Associated Press says.

The labor relations board ordered his reinstatement despite protests of Donald Richberg, director of the emergency council, and Blackwell Smith, NRA acting general counsel. Both officials maintained the complaint should have been heard by the newspaper industrial board. NRA then announced it would ask the newspaper industrial board's opinion.

Six Held for Fake Calls.

Plebiscite Tomorrow To Set Saar Future

Observer Sees Probable Return To Germany As League Supervises Voting.

By Margaret Hardy.
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

Geneva, Jan. 12.

OF the three possible results of the Saar plebiscite, it is already generally agreed that only one is probable. It may be considered certain that, taken as a whole, the popular consultation tomorrow will show a vote favorable to a return to Germany. The plebiscite will mark the frustration of the attempt made at Versailles to detach the Saar basin from Germany and incorporate it into France, or, failing that, to establish an autonomous territory.

According to certain impartial observers it is, however, possible that in spite of the general preference for Germany, in two parts of the territory (the regions of Sarreluois and Sarreguemines) the votes will be divided between return to Germany and the maintenance of the League regime. This situation demands a consideration of the manner in which the vote will be taken and the arrangements for the counting of the votes.

In accordance with the Treaty of Versailles, and the decisions of the Council of the League, as contained in the regulations for the plebiscite, the voting district unit will be the group of communes (Burgermeisterei) or the individual community (Gemeinde), depending on the existing local administrative organization. That is to say, the votes will be counted not for the territory as a whole, but for each voting district separately.

Immediately after the closing of the polls tomorrow evening the sealed urns containing the ballots will be sent to Geneva under the escort of guards of neutral nationality. The urns will be immediately opened and the ballots counted in Geneva by the Plebiscite Commission itself, so that the results will be announced to the council on the 14th or 15th. What will the situation be when the result of the vote is announced? What will be the next step?

* * * *

IT is often forgotten, in discussions of the result of the vote, that the final decision as to the disposition of the territory depends not on the result of the vote, but on the decision of the council. The Treaty of Versailles says on this point, "The League of Nations shall decide on the sovereignty . . . taking into account the wishes of the inhabitants as expressed by the voting."

That is, a decision of the council is necessary for the final disposition of the territory, and it is to this that the council will turn its attention immediately after the vote. In case of a vote favoring, in all the voting districts, the maintenance of the status quo, obviously the council should decide for that solution. In conformity with the interpretation of the Treaty of Versailles adopted by the council in its December session, if the council decides for the maintenance of the status quo, this means that the territory passes under the sovereignty of the league.

In this case the council would, after the decision on the principle, elaborate a suitable permanent administrative organization for the territory. This result, by which European territory would be placed under league sovereignty and league administration, would be a very interesting and an entirely new departure in international practice. The realization of such a position is, however, not very probable. If, as seems the most likely, the vote is in favor of Germany in all the districts, then, too, the council will have no choice, but should decide for a return of the entire territory to Germany.

But there still remains the possibility that some districts may favor the regime of the League of Nations, and in this case the course to be taken is not so clear.

* * * *

FRENCH policy, it must be noted, guided as it is today by M. Laval, tends to favor an immediate and permanent liquidation of the Saar question. Contrary to the late M. Barthou, who hoped for a maintenance of the status quo, M. Laval would like to see the entire territory returned to Germany in order that this source of difference between the two countries may once and for all disappear. M. Laval, though less an orator and more a diplomat, is a new Briand, trying as Briand did, to establish a Franco-German rapprochement.

This fact will be of great importance in the event of a vote for the status quo in some of the districts. For it would then fall to the Council to arrange for the passage of these parts of the territory to League sovereignty. Should these districts be so distributed, geographically, as to permit the formation of a territorial ensemble, the task of the Council would still be comparatively simple, for the results of the vote may still be followed strictly. It is the case of several districts isolated one from the other, and perhaps surrounded by territories whose inhabitants have expressed themselves in favor of return to Germany, that presents a real problem. What would then be the action of the Council?

It is here that the intervention of the League organ would go beyond the mere recognition of the results of the plebiscite and become a real decision. The authors of the Treaty of Versailles were surely thinking of this more complicated case when they said, "The League shall decide . . . taking into account the wishes of the inhabitants." They wanted to give to the Council the liberty of following only approximately the results of the vote in a case where strict application of the indication given in the plebiscite would produce economic administrative and even political causes of friction.

The Council must in this case place under League sovereignty a territory in which votes for that solution predominate, but for the sake of a practical solution some districts which had voted for Germany would have to be given to the League, while others which had voted for the League would be left to Germany. For in the face of such a situation it would be inconceivable that the Council should merely follow the plebiscite results, keeping for the League isolated districts throughout the territory. Such a course would be economic and administrative nonsense, as well as a permanent source of friction.

BUT a decision which follows only partially the results of the plebiscite may very easily arouse great dissatisfaction in Germany. It is for this reason that it is fortunate that the plebiscite comes at a moment when both sides, France and Germany, seem to be seeking a rapprochement. The conciliation policy of M. Laval, and his readiness to make concessions to arrive at a satisfactory closing of the question, will have a very real importance and usefulness in the event of isolated districts favoring the regime of the League of Nations.

From the time when the council, as is to be expected, attributes a whole or a part of the territory to Germany, the Saar will enter a period of transition. Germany will not reenter immediately into the full exercise of all her rights over the territory and the inhabitants. By the terms of the Council decision of December, there will be a period of one year during which special rights will be guaranteed to the inhabitants. They will have the right to leave the territory at will, to sell their real property and to remove their funds, as well as to take away their movable goods. Also, during this period of one year, the inhabitants may have recourse to the tribunals of the plebiscite against vexatious pursuit by the German authorities.

Germany and France have further agreed that, in the case of the territory returning to Germany, there will be a period of at least one month after the decision of the council, during which the territory will enjoy a special regime. This will be an intermediary stage to facilitate the smooth transition from the present international regime to the definitive German exercise of sovereignty. A sudden change of government might have as a consequence a serious troubling of the economic life of the territory. During this intermediate period the international police contingents will be withdrawn.

The settlement of the Saar question is being made under much more favorable circumstances than the Franco-German tension some months ago seemed to foreshadow. If no new complication arises at the eleventh hour, it may be said that the expected conversations between France and Germany looking toward a real rapprochement will enjoy an exceptionally favorable atmosphere as a result of this historic plebiscite.

Diplomats' 'At Homes' Lure Society

The Skvirskys Receive at U. S. S. R. Embassy; MacWhites Hosts.

Mme. Laboulaye, Mme. Peter Also Visited by Friends.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society went calling again yesterday afternoon; not on members of the Cabinet, although Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was at home to the personnel of the Department of State, but on the wives of several members of the Diplomatic Corps who observed their Friday at homes.

The largest reception of the afternoon was that given by the Charge d'Affaires of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Skvirsky in the embassy on Sixteenth street. Mr. and Mme. Skvirsky have recently returned to Washington from a four months' visit in their homeland, and yesterday's reception was the first occasion that their many friends have had to welcome them. The Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky are en route to Washington from Honolulu, where the latter joined her husband on his return trip from Russia.

The Soviet Embassy is among the most handsome in town, and yesterday afternoon it was brilliantly lighted and filled with members of the Diplomatic Corps, official and resident society. The Charge and Mme. Skvirsky received their guests at the head of the red-carpeted marble staircase. Mme. Skvirsky wore an afternoon gown of black velvet trimmed with a single rose. The hundreds of guests gathered in groups in the drawing rooms, or in the dining room where a buffet table was spread with a variety of delicious foreign cakes and sandwiches, and great bowls of caviar, which was served with tiny sandwiches of brown bread.

Mrs. Chalkley Attends.

The Commercial Counselor and Mrs. H. O. Chalkley were seen chatting with Col. George Wetzel in one of the smaller drawing rooms, Mrs. Chalkley wearing a smart black frock with a hat of black straw, turned smartly off the face and trimmed with a cluster of tiny gardenias. In another group was Senator Arthur Capper, in conversation with Mr. Theodore A. Walters, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior. The Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso, immaculate in afternoon attire, was there with several members of his staff, among them the Secretary of Embassy, Signor Giuseppe Tommasi, who was seen with the First Secretary of the French Embassy, M. Roger Gaucheron, and the Air Attache, Maj. Robert Champsaur.

The First Secretary of the German Embassy and Mme. Scholz were there with the Third Secretary, Herr Gustav Struve, and nearby was the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba, Senor Don Jose Baron.

Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, wearing a rose-colored tweed suit trimmed with gray astrakhan, with a hat to match, was seen chatting with Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who wore a costume of black with a handsome broadtail coat.

MacWhites Entertain.

At the Shoreham Hotel, the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite observed their day at home and received several hundred members of Capital society. Mrs. MacWhite wore a black frock with a tunic of cherry red and gold lame, and laughingly remarked that she had just heard there was a long line of callers waiting at the chancery to be received! Several members of the Abbey Players, who are appearing this week at the National Theater, were there and added much interest to the afternoon, as many of the guests had seen their performances and were delighted to have an opportunity to congratulate the players.

At the tea table, which was decorated with masses of red roses, were Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Rexford G. Tugwell, wife of the Undersecretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Counselor of the Canadian Legation.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the Ambassador of France, received most informally in the Embassy on Sixteenth street yesterday afternoon when she was assisted by the ladies of the Embassy staff, and Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, was also at home in the Legation on Kalorama Circle.

Fabrication of Fine Neckties Requires Skill In Making and in the Selection of Materials

Spanish Dancer Was Inspiration For Pioneer Tie

Much Care and Careful Selection Required for High-Class Product.

By M. A. Weiss.

EDWARD HUGHES BALL the Golden Ball, as he was called in the era of bucks, macaronis and Corinthians—was the originator of the necktie. Story has it that being in love with a Spanish dancer, this scion of English aristocracy devised the black cravat to be worn by her as a foil for her gleaming throat. Whether or not that's the truth, fact remains that the well dressed man of today, has more neckties in his wardrobe than any other single item. And it is equally true, that he probably knows less about their materials, construction and other technical points, than about any other of his accessories.

Generically, neckties may be divided into four classifications—four-in-hand, bow, ascot and the hack scarf. The most common type of necktie is the four-in-hand. There are several constructions of this tie, the newest and smartest being the Tremlett shape, usually known as the seven fold tie, which eliminates a lining and takes about twice the amount of material of the regular four-in-hand.

Wear Shows Difference.

At a casual glance, the layman might find little to distinguish the cheap, thrown together tie, with the fine product. But a few times of wearing soon makes apparent the difference in wearing quality and appearance.

The steps in constructing a fine scarf are quite interesting. First let us deal with the lining. Good lining is a pure wool product, cut on the bias, and the way it is inserted and cut determines the shape of the tie and its life.

The standard width of tie silks is 24 inches. Two pieces are required in the construction of a tie, and these are hemmed together, accurately and carefully by machine. The joint at the neck, where the pieces are joined together, is then carefully pressed by hand, so that the wearer will have a flat neckband with no ungainly bumps or wrinkles.

A heavy cardboard gauge is then used to insert the lining in the proper place so that it will not wrinkle or pucker.

The unsewn necktie is then wrapped around the lining and pinned by hand every few inches as a custom tailor pins your suit fittings. Then the all-important operation of slip stitching, upon which resilient construction depends, is done by hand. These are even spaced, loose stitches that sew the lining to the back of the tie. The ends are shaped, and then the all-important pressing job is performed by hand. Light fabrics require a delicate pressing touch to avoid flatness and dullness.

Experts Take Hand.

After these operations each tie is inspected by an expert, and loose threads are trimmed. The result is a hand-made necktie that will stand up under much wear and retain its shape. A machine-made tie is an inferior product because a purely mechanical operation can not successfully cope with "slippery" silk fabrics used in necktie manufacture. Uneven placing of the lining, poorly joined ends, or a knot that will not hold, is the result.

The bow tie is coming more and more to the fore, especially since the university man has taken it to heart—or rather to neck. It certainly is indispensable for evening wear. The various types are too well known to require an explanation here. However, it may be wise to study the illustration for a simple and easy method of tieing this tie correctly.

The hacking scarf, should not properly be classed as a necktie, being originally designed for riding, but since movie stars and other celebrities have taken to wearing them with sports and polo shirts, it may be advisable to make bare mention of them here. Foulards and madder prints are good especially with tweeds. Wear them pinned so they'll stay in place.

Ascot Is Formal.

The Ascot scarf, is the formal daytime necktie. Its rich silks and neutralized colorings afford a perfect excuse for wearing a tie pin. In fact it must be pinned to stay in place and attain its puffed smartness. See the illustration for the proper method of tieing.

We have briefly covered the classifications of neckwear. However, we are often bewildered in hearing a salesman mouth knowing phrases of "boucle, moire and what-not." The basic necktie fabrics, their usage and construction are as follows:

Barathea: A very fine textured cloth, very popular since it holds its shape and lustre. It might aptly be described as a broken twill. Smart with lounge suits. Often a solid ground with contrasting figures.

Boucle: From the French word meaning "buckled." This is a new fabric adapted from the "nigger-head" overcoatings. Its rough surface gathers lights and facets the component colors. Fine with tweeds and sportswear.

Brocade: A heavy silk with jacquarded figures. Not very popular this season except among those types who favor opulence. For lounge suits and semi-formal day wear.

Charvets: A soft corded material with a luxurious appearance. Named after the French originator. Subtle grounds with spaced contrasting figures. Suitable for all but formal occasions. Sometimes it is called "Regence."

Grenadines: The most luxurious and open weave of all neckwear. The finest types are hand loomed in Italy. Ties beautifully, is most colorful and gauze like. Holds its shape. May be worn for all but formal occassions.

Italian Twills: A fine corded construction, usually dark grounds with colorful spaces and all-over figures. For lounge suits.

Louisine: A fine basket-weave construction unusually attractive in small checks and plaids. Has a pleasant "hand" and a sort of "shark-skinish" feel. For sports or business wear depending on the pattern.

Mogador: A firm corded fabric, generally striped. The name was adapted for the Moroccan city of that name, because the strippings were reminiscent of the burnouses—the flowing striped cloaks—of the natives. A university favorite, particularly in club colors.

Moire: A water silk faille in which the colors are engraved by means of rubber rollers. In little use this season, except on the continent. Distinctly a "dressy" tie.

Ottoman: A corduroy like faille with heavy sharp ribs. Usually striped. For sports or dress.

Persians: Elaborately patterned ties borrowing their motifs from Aramic textiles and parchments. The main design is generally a conventionalization of the acanthus leaf, with vine and scroll. Rich and colorful, these are distinctly dress ties.

Rep or Repp: Corded fabrics which have been popularized since the advent of regimental and club stripings. Highly popular for dress or sports wear.

Satins: Glossy thick textured fabric on which patterns are jacquarded or printed. A smart tie this season in solid colors, worn with pearl pin for color-relief. For dressy occasions only.

Spitalsfields: A Mosaic design of all over figures, coming in numerous weaves. Particularly in fashion favor this season, for all lounge suit occasions.

Warp Prints: The warp print satin stripe tie is an example of continental influence on neckwear this season. It generally combines a mottled solid color surface with a multicolored stripe. For dressy occasions.

This by no means comprises the entire category of neckwear fabrics, but is a basic list of those most frequently encountered. This spring, advance data gathered from legitimate style sources indicates the return of the printed tie to fashion favor. New methods and improved technique permits a more brilliant variety of designs than ever before seen.

I call particular attention to stripes formed of small squares and cubes; to dull grounds with imposed floral motifs; to Spitalsfields and Paiselys which resemble the shawl your grandmother got from that New England clipper captain; to the newest string knit ties—so much like the string gloves you've been wearing this winter; to linen and silk combinations which have a new soft, nubbed beauty; to combinations of blacks, greys, corals and soft greens, and to the new wide wale repps—ribs and stripes twice as wide as heretofore—which will certainly distinguish your sports outfit.

The Ascot...
A. Loop over
B. Square knot both ends thru.
C. Crossed ends pinned and puffed
Tie them correctly!
It's easy when you know how!
The Bow Tie.....
A. Once over, top end slightly longer.
B. Square or Sailor's knot
C. One end turned back thru knot
D. Other end turned back and bow completed.

Even a poor quality tie can be made to seem smart if it is properly knotted. The trick in tying a four-in-hand is to have the large end go once and once only around. After you bring the large end through the knot, place your index finger in such a manner that you get a break in the end under the knot which is maintained after the knot is pulled firm. The proper methods of tying an Ascot or bow tie . . . those two difficult items of neckwear are illustrated above. A properly tied tie holds its shape better and lasts longer.

Which Is Most Important to Woman: Dress or Character?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH:
I have been criticized by friends who say I do not dress well enough, or take half the interest in clothes a young woman should. I have always felt there are more important things in life than fussing over details of dress. However, it seems I am wrong; that the world judges one by superficial standards of sartorial appearance; and that one's character and mind aren't half so important as what one has on one's back.

• • • •

I can afford to dress well and do, for special occasions, but most of the time I generally put on whatever comes to hand. Don't you think most women spend too much time on dress, considering the brief span of life, and the more important things demanding one's attention? So many women just make clothes horses of themselves, in my estimation.

READER.

Impeacable Dress Important.

DEAR READER: I'm afraid you're more than half right in ironically suggesting a woman's mind and character aren't half so important as what she has on her back, judged by the standards of this world.

• • • •

However, I wouldn't counsel a woman to neglect the development of her mind and character in order to devote herself fanatically to the cult of appearance. I would suggest, rather, that she assiduously cultivate all three—attaching to each an equal importance.

• • • •

The woman who can afford to dress well, but doesn't, save for special occasions, is committing a vulgarity equivalent to having a set of manners for private life less fastidious than those she reserves for public parade, it seems to me.

• • • •

It is no whit less important to strive for impeccable sartorial turnout than to work for a cultivated mind and a noble character. Perfection in one is interdependent upon and interrelated with the other, I believe. The fastidious inner man is dissatisfied with less than perfection in his representation by the outward and visible man. And the same applies to woman.

M. H.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion without being foppish is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Satisfactory Tie Colors.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: I find that by selecting neckties with some red in them I get greater usage and more satisfactory color results. Perhaps you would like to pass this on to your readers.

E. H.

• • • •

SIR: Most suits have a blue or neutralization of blue in their make-up. Since red is the complementary color of blue, your selection is a clever one.

Data on Cocktail Jacket.

• • • •

Tweed Suit for Now and Later.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: I'm going South, and want to purchase a tweed suit that will be fashionable for wear in spring and early summer in Washington. What do you suggest?

TRAVELER.

• • • •

SIR: Shetlands or Irish homespun in shades of blue, blue-gray tan or ecrue, with colored nubs and curls. I personally am of the opinion that these combined with the gabardine suit will be the basic garments of the spring wardrobe and are certainly suitable for Southern resort wear.

Chubby Package" Contains Five or Six Kinds of Pure Confections.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

CHILDREN SEEM to be the special pets of manufacturers this season. Not only do soaps me in attractive packages to make bathing more fun than ever for children under 10, but now boxes of candy have appeared on the counters which are especially for children too.

Because so many parents fear a tummy ache for junior if he makes adway into the box of chocolates, certain concern has put out a hubby package" which is junior's vn and will not give him candy ouble under any circumstances. The "chubby package" contains e or six kinds of candy, all re sugar and water, but got- n up in so many guises a child ill feel he has a wide field to oose his tid-bits from. Naturally ch piece is dressed up too, to ake it doubly attractive for some cky child.

Inasmuch as a package costs only cents it's a nice thing to take ith you when you call on child- ting parents. Not only will it ease the child and maybe keep m quiet—but it will insure your elcome with his parents.

Refillable Talcum Boxes.

An odd little item is the refillable lcum box on display in the toilet ods department of a downtown ore. It's almost spherical in shape t a short neck makes it look ightly like a jug.

It's made of a sturdy metal inted a bright red and further rnished with gold trimmings. fter the present supply of talc is ne you simply return with your tractive container and a refill is ours for very little.

Inexpensive Tub Cleaners.

Perhaps one of the best little tub eaners to appear on the market cently is also one of the least ex- nsive. It is a small rubber onger about as large as the or- nary cake of soap. Somewhere side a very fine dirt-chasing pow- r is concealed and doesn't come t until after the sponge has been mpened and squeezed. After is, rub it around your tub and ill disappears. The price is only cents.

Small Baskets of Candy.

Epi-curio is the odd but interest- g name of the small basket of ndy found, not as you'd think in candy or food corner, but in the otions section of a local shop.

It is advertised as "something de- cious to eat in something lovely keep." And that is the case ex- tly. Besides the little basket ere are in most cases little orien- l-looking pottery plates filled with rystallized fruit looking equal to elting in your mouth.

Deep Fat Thermometers.

There is nothing like a deep fat ermometer to insure the tastiness your cooking. Take for instance, illies, candies, frostings and any- ing you pre- are in deep fat! y testing the mperature as cooks you can asily tell just hen it should e removed, omething add- d, or whatever ou should do.

Deep fat ther- ometers really ost very little nd those quali- ed to know the ins and outs of ooking say they are one of the ook's best bets for successful ishes.

Individual Ice Crusher.

With a certain little individual e crusher you can crush your ice your glass without endangering e glass itself. With the same ssurance you can crush the ice round the cup of your fruit or eafood cocktail.

Ideal Drink Mixers.

Mixettes are ideal drink mixers nd add an ornamental touch be- des. They come in groups of a ozen and cost only $1.

Don't try to economize by not dding a box of mixettes to your ar. You'll find they'll save your lver, add to your party and prove big convenience in many respects.

Bargain in Fitted Cases.

It isn't often such an opportunity mes around knocking at your oor or more literally groping for our purse strings.

But at present you can buy a tted case of fine leather for only 4.95. Just recently these cases ere selling for $29, some for $20. ey contain an extra top tray hich holds a comb, brush, clothes rush, shoe horn, two lotion bottles nd two cosmetic jars.

"Classic Robe" Fills A Gap in Wardrobe

Pattern No. 585.

THIS is the sort of mannish, casual robe that fills a great gap in most women's wardrobes. So exactly right to slip into quickly when the more feminine type of negligee is just a fluttery nuisance, when the telephone rings, or the baby cries at night, or a tradesman appears unexpectedly at the door. And, of course, they are perfect for travel when made in smart dark colors.

This model is particularly easy to wear. Good wide lapels, and shirred fullness at the top of the sleeves to give that broad-shouldered, slim-hipped look to the figure. It comes in three sizes, small, medium and large. In the medium size, the robe takes 5¾ yards of 39-inch material.

Mrs. Nellie Sapp Is Awarded First Prize in Salad Contest

By Dorothea Duncan.

HERE IS a salad that will bring a breath of spring to your winter menus. The recipe—June in January salad—submitted this week in The Post's recipe contest by Mrs. Nellie Sapp, 717 Boundary avenue, Silver Springs, Md., is awarded first prize, $3. Second prize, $2, goes to Miss Lillie Dickerson, 422 Twentieth street northwest, for her recipe for Ham Mousse, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. D. B. Zimmer, 3261 K street northwest, for her recipe for Student Temptation.

The recipes follow in the order mentioned above.

June in January Salad.

2 cups whole strawberries
2 large California oranges
½ cup granulated sugar
1 large grapefruit
1 bunch fresh mint
1 head romaine.

Dressing.

2 tablespoons strawberry juice
5 tablespoons salad oil
1 teaspoon powdered sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika

Separate the oranges and grapefruit into sections. Mince the mint leaves very fine with a pair of scissors. Place the mint in a bowl, cover with the sugar, stir well and let stand until the sugar is absorbed. At serving time, arrange the orange and grapefruit sections alternately on romaine and sprinkle with the mint. Add the dressing and garnish with whole perfect berries.

Ham Mousse Salad.

Finely chop two cups cold boiled ham. Pound in a mortar with two teaspoons of prepared mustard and a few grains of cayenne. Soak one tablespoon of gelatin in ¼ cup of cold water three minutes and dissolve in ¼ cup boiling water. Add to ham mixture; when well mixed add half a cup of heavy cream beaten stiff. Turn into mold and chill. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Student Temptation.

3 cups macaroni cut in one-inch pieces and cooked
2 cups shrimp
1 cup sliced, stuffed olives
2 tablespoons capers
2 dill pickles
1 cup French dressing
1 sliced green pepper
Mayonnaise
4 hard cooked eggs

Cook the macaroni according to directions and blanch well so that it will be firm and not sticky. Wash and clean the shrimp and allow to marinate in the French dressing one hour, then drain and combine with sliced olives, green peppers and capers. Mix and add macaroni and mix again carefully with a fork. Then blend with just enough mayonnaise to hold the salad together. Allow to stand half an hour to ripen. Line a wooden mixing bowl with lettuce, add the salad, and garnish with sliced hard cooked eggs and circles of pickle.

Jellied Deviled Eggs

1 package lemon gelatin
1 teaspoon onion juice
2 cups boiling water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
6 hard cooked eggs
2 tablespoons minced, cooked ham
1 teaspoon tart relish
Salt and mayonnaise

Dissolve gelatin in water. Add lemon juice and onion juice. Pour half mixture into tray of automatic refrigerator or into mold. Let it set. Meanwhile, halve the eggs lengthwise, scoop out yolks, without breaking whites. Mash yolks, mix with ham, relish and salt to taste, and enough mayonnaise to moisten well. Put this mixture back into egg whites. Then set these on top of gelatine mixture. Dot top of eggs with bits of chopped green pepper and pimento. Pour rest of gelatin mixture over, and chill till set.

Beet Salad.

Boil beets, all of same size, and remove skins. Then scoop out centers and fill beet cups with following mixture. Take the whites and yolks of hard cooked eggs, mashed very fine and seasoned with salt, pepper, a little sugar, a few drops of onion juice mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Place filled beet cups on lettuce leaves with a little mayonnaise on top of each cup and a dash of paprika.

Bunch of Grapes Salad.

1 large bunch white grapes
8 pieces canned pears (halves) drained and dried on a towel
1 package white cream cheese
1 head lettuce
½ cup French dressing

Place pears, round side up, and cover with cheese, which has been mashed and creamed. Cut grapes in halves and stick them very close together into the cheese, round side of grape up. Place pears in shallow dish containing French dressing. Chill. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves which have been dotted with French dressing.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

IF JANUARY 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

On this January 12 it is very advisable to conserve your time, as you are likely to have many business and social demands, and if you are not careful engagements may overlap, causing you needless mental agitation.

You are likely to be entertained in a very delightful way and it will be good judgment to express your appreciation in no uncertain manner. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in an affaire du coeur, will avoid trouble if they guard against being absent-minded regarding something they have promised.

If a woman and January 12 is your birthday, your energetic physical force, as well as mental activity, makes either a professional or business career advisable. Your being engaged in some activity should not prevent you having a very happy married life. You will probably have a great deal of money, some of it possibly through your own efforts. Socially you should be popular, and through your social contacts be able to advance your business interests.

It is very desirable that you mix freely with people, for the more friends you can make the better it will be for your personal affairs. Literature, art, interior decorating, restaurant management, or retail lines of selling which require a strong personality should enable you to reap a satisfactory financial reward for your efforts.

The child born on January 12 is very likely, when it passes adolescence, to attract attention through either its excellent work at school or prowess in athletics.

If a man and January 12 is your natal day, your courage, combined with sincerity of purpose and ability to win friends, should enable you to successfully overcome any and all obstacles which might arise. You will succeed if you persevere. Verse or prose writing, lecturing, the ministry, engineering, or specialized branches of art may be the media through which your efforts will be crowned by success.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

CHILDREN YEARN for companionship; yet a group of youngsters often are ruthlessly cruel in withholding friendship from a child who is not one of "the gang." When this situation occurs an older person can do much to remedy it.

A 14-year-old recently told me a story of how a neighbor had endeared himself to her when she was 6, and for some reason the children of her own age were shutting her out from their secrets. They gathered in an intimate knot, whispering into each other's ears, but when she approached, the little crowd dispersed. The neighbor, father of one of the girls, saw what was happening and he called her to him; bent low to whisper a secret in her ear! What that secret was she has long since forgotten, but the feeling of elation in knowing that she, too, had a secret, remained through the years.

Of course, we hope to train the shy or lonely child to make her own adjustments to new surroundings, and when she attains that ability she will be happier for it. But she needs a helping hand on the way.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter. Grandmothers' Remedies.

MANY of us look back upon our period of childhood "dosing" with mixed emotions. We realized that grandmother dominated the situation and that what was good for mother when she was a child was good for her children. We can still hear her say: "Now you take this straight off. Didn't I rear six children and every one living, and don't I remember how I brought your mother through an attack of croup when the doctor didn't know what to do and the child nigh choking to death?" Bless her! We sputtered and fussed, but we took what was offered.

We may recall our yearly siege with sulphur and molasses to ward off colds, to enrich the blood, and to get rid of poisons. We had sassafras tea in the spring for the purpose of thinning the blood that had presumably become thick and sluggish during the winter months. How well we remember the goose grease that was applied to the chest, shoulders, and back—rubbed in so vigorously that we sometimes howled with pain. This was a sure preventive of colds, croup, and pneumonia. And then the flannel pad that was pinned to the underwear or hung by straps from the neck. Great faith was placed in asefetida and certain children wore a little bag of this noxious substance constantly for the purpose of driving away contagion.

Fortunately, most medical folklore contains a grain of truth here and there. Sassafras tea compelled the child to drink quantities of water. The sulphur and molasses did no harm. While the ordinary diet contains an adequate amount of sulphur, we know that the body is subject to a steady sulphur loss in the growth of hair. Goose grease is still used and probably always will be, and so is camphorated oil, for we know that camphor has some effect in stimulating the circulation. There is no difference in the digestibility of fruit at any stated period of the day, although its effect on the intestines is usually greater when taken on an empty stomach.

Every succeeding generation will use some of grandmother's remedies. All that any one can do, grandmother or physician, is to assist nature.

Fight Opens For Retrial Of Newton

Lawyers Seek to Reopen Case of Ex-Soldier Who Slew Woman.

New EvidenceDemanded by Judge; Reprieve Asked of Peery.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—An effort to obtain a new trial for Noah Newton, 36-year-old Stafford County former service man sentenced to death on a plea of guilty to the murder of his former sweetheart, Josie Allen, 44-year-old factory worker, was launched today.

Attorneys representing Newton talked with Judge Frederick W. Coleman in Fredericksburg who imposed the sentence and asked informally for a rehearing of the case Judge Coleman told them his decision had been given and that the case would be reopened only if new evidence were found.

Later in the day one of the attorneys, William S. Snow, of Alexandria, asked Gov. Peery to grant a 90-day reprieve to Newton, who is scheduled to die February 15 and the Governor took his request under advisement.

Attention was attracted to Newton's case because of the rapidity with which the sentence followed commission of the crime and the unusual circumstance of a death sentence being imposed in a trial without a jury.

Preliminary Hearing Waived.

Miss Allen was shot to death at Newton's home on December 31 and five days later he waived a preliminary hearing and was brought to trial before Judge Coleman. Asking for an immediate hearing, he entered a plea of guilty and told the court he had shot the woman because he had been trying to break off an affair of several years' standing between them and she had "meddled" when he became interested in a younger woman.

Judge Coleman said he could see no justification for the shooting and imposed the supreme penalty.

Newton was brought to Henrico County Jail to await carrying out of the sentence and several days ago Gordon Ambler, Richmond attorney, said he had talked with him and was told that Newton did not realize he was pleading guilty to a first-degree murder charge, but thought his crime was a less serious one because he had been drinking with Miss Allen and shot her in a fit of anger.

Three Confer With Judge.

Mr. Ambler, Mr. Snow and W. J. Gibson, of Fredericksburg, the attorney appointed by the court to defend Newton, held the conference with Judge Coleman today.

They were reminded that in the absence of the condemned man the judge could not entertain a formal motion.

While taking their plea for the reprieve to the Governor, the attorneys indicated that if the effort for a rehearing failed, they might still ask the Governor to commute Newton's sentence to life imprisonment.

Washington Couple to Lead Prom Prior to W & L Fancy Dress Ball

Mr. Wallis will be costumed as Prince Metternich, host at the first imperial ball of the Congress of Vienna, which will be the theme of the ball.

Oyster Board Of Three Men Is Advocated

Bushwood Dealer Urges Strict Enforcement of Culling Law.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Oystermen of St. Marys County are aroused over the proposed legislation asked by oyster men in other sections of the State. William Thrall, Bushwood sea food dealer, who has had long experience in dealing with residents of the county, believes he is voicing the views of the majority of them in a statement made today.

Thrall, who also is chairman of the Republican central committee for this county, declared:

"Sixteen years ago, Maryland occupied first place in sea food products and thousands of dollars of revenue was derived from them. Because of inefficient law and failure to protect this valuable asset, the State has dropped to fourth place, and the industry is in a deplorable condition."

He thinks the supervision of this industry is too big a job for one man, and that there should be three conservation commissioners, instead of one.

County Boards Urged.

Thrall advocates a commission of three for each county to assist the State commissioners in their work and to keep them acquainted with needs. These county commissioners would serve without pay.

Moreover, he believes there should be more rigid enforcement of the culling law, and public oyster grounds should not be leased by the State to private individuals. In his opinion, the Potomac River should be kept closed to handscraping and dredging, allowing only the use of tongs. A tonger can get from 15 to 25 tubs of oysters a day, two men to a boat, and make from $7 to $10 per day, he declares.

License Fee Cut Sought.

The oystermen consider the present license fee of $5.25 is too much. A reduction to $3.75 is asked.

The problem of helping oystermen over their dull season and keeping them off relief rolls could be solved by appropriating a sum from the relief funds to replant depleted oyster beds in the spring, many oystermen claim.

Nancy Hall and Frank Price in Spotlight at Social Event.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Miss Nancy Hall and Frank L. Price, both of Washington, will share the spotlight here this month when Washington and Lee University students stage their annual fancy dress set of dances, long recognized as one of the leading social events of Eastern colleges.

They will lead the junior prom on January 24, the first of three dances which the set will include. Mr. Price is president of the junior class in the university, which sponsors the prom the evening before the fancy dress ball.

Miss Hall attended George Washington University for several years and is now an employe of the United States Department of Agriculture. She is a member of Isa Chi Omega sorority. Mr. Price is the son of Dr. and Mrs. David J. Price.

Fancy dress ball, which will be held Friday night, January 25, will include an elaborate figure to be led by Don Wallis, of Indiana, with Miss Isabel Connolly, of Muncie, Ind., now a student at Indiana University. Mr. Wallis is president of the student organization that took over the affairs of the fancy dress ball some years ago.

Washington and Lee's fancy dress ball had its inception back in 1907 at a private ball given by Miss Annie Jo White, who still lives in a home on the university campus.

The theme of the ball this year will center around the Congress of Vienna which convened from September, 1814, to June, 1815, and all who attend will be in authentic costume, especially those in the figure.

Isham Jones Orchestra will play for all the dances in the set, which will be concluded with a "Miami Triad dance" Saturday evening, sponsored by Sigma Chi, Beta Theta Pi, and Phi Delta Theta fraternities.

2 Farm Groups Ask Permanent AAA Program

Baltimore Meeting Urges Great Falls Dams to Generate Power.

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP). — A resolution indorsing the agricultural adjustment act and supporting efforts to make the legislation permanent was adopted unanimously today at the closing session of the convention of the Maryland Agricultural Society and Maryland Farm Bureau Federation.

The delegates also expressed their opinion that the 10 per cent cut made in telephone rates in the District of Columbia should also be made effective in Maryland and urged the Public Service Commission to continue its fight for decreased rates.

In anticipation of the appointment of a milk control board by Gov. Harry W. Nice, a resolution advocated that the board be limited in its action to arbitration, but that it have powers to enforce its rulings.

Pair Escapes After Failure and Gun Battle.

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—Two safeblowers, who left behind an automobile bearing District of Columbia tags, were hunted today by Baltimore County police after an unsuccessful attempt was made to rob the safe of the Reisterstown Lumber Co. at Glen Morris.

The two cracksmen disappeared after a gun battle with Patrolman Clarence Lockard and Walter Brown, who resides near the company's plant. Nobody was known to officials to have been hit during the fight.

Brown's dog awoke him early today and he saw an automobile parked near the plant's office. A muffled report of an explosion caused him to summon Patrolman Lockard.

Nice to Seek $7,200,000 Relief Taxes

State Warned Federal Aid Rests on Ability to Share Load.

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—Legislation proposing a combination of several schemes of taxation as means to raise $7,200,000 yearly for relief purposes will be ready for introduction into the general assembly next week, probably on Wednesday, it was learned today.

It is unlikely, however, that the State budget for the coming biennium will be ready for introduction before February 1, it was indicated. Gov. Nice and his budget aids have not completed their study of the budget as yet and it must be printed before introduction.

$7,200,000 Needed.

The Federal Government estimated that $18,000,000 yearly is required for Maryland's relief needs and has ruled that the State must furnish $7,200,000 of that amount. The Government, through Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, has said it must have assurance by February 1 that the State will provide that amount or that Federal assistance in meeting relief burdens will cease.

No indication was given today as to what specific forms of taxation will be recommended in the measure, which is to be an Administration bill. It was said, however, that the combination would provide taxes which would fall on all citizens and not on any one particular class.

Gov. Nice, in a statement issued some weeks prior to his inauguration, said that he was considering a combination of a sales tax and a State income tax as means to raise the required amount for relief. He mentioned no specific forms of taxation in his inaugural message, however, other than to say he did not wish real estate to be the base for further taxation.

In view of that statement, it was assumed in some circles that both the sales tax and the income tax probably would be included in the bill.

Opposition Looms.

Each of those forms of taxation will meet with strong opposition. Senator J. Allan Coad (Democrat), St. Marys, who is slated for the majority floor leadership of the Senate, has expressed opposition to each of those taxes. It also was reported that some members of the Republican party in the Senate were opposed to a sales tax and, at present at least, favored a higher tax on land for State purposes, despite Gov. Nice's expressed opposition to such a levy.

The proposal for a State income tax also has met with much opposition. Some attorneys have expressed the opinion that such a levy would be unconstitutional unless a constitutional amendment were adopted allowing a State income tax.

The administration measure providing for a system of unemployment insurance is not yet ready for introduction and probably will not be dropped into legislative hoppers until February 1 or after. The committee appointed by Gov. Nice to study that problem spent this afternoon at work.

Gov. Nice to Cut Salary In Economy Program

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (AP).—Gov. Harry Nice, rounding out his third day in office today, announced that he would cut his own salary 22 per cent for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Nice has announced that he will ask all State departments to economize drastically during the remainder of the year, which ends next September 30, in an effort to offset a threatened budget of more than $2,000,000.

Under the budget, the Governer's salary of $4,500 is subject to a cut of 15 per cent, but Gov. Nice announced that he would impose a further 7 per cent reduction on top of the 15 per cent cut. He said he hopes to effect the same degree of saving in other allowances for the Governor.

The maintenance fund for the executive mansion has been $15,000, but was reduced to $12,000 under Gov. Ritchie, who went out of office Wednesday.

Girls Seek to 'Convert' Sailors to Communism

Rear Admiral Woodward at Quantico Traces Radical Campaign to Undermine America's Naval Defense.

In their efforts to undermine America's national defense, Communists are using women to make "dates" with bluejackets and to try to convert them, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, U. S. N., told Chapter No. 44 of the National Sojourners at the Marine Barracks in Quantico, Va., last night.

"The early Communistic activities in the Navy," Admiral Woodward said, "began to show up about 1930 through the distribution of leaflets to liberty men on shore. They have steadily increased since then and are now exceedingly well organized, with trained agitators doing their work, constantly following ship movements from port to port, and increasing their personal efforts to contaminate our men."

Cites Investigation.

A recent investigation, Admiral Woodward said, showed that small groups of radicals usually go aboard ship with other visitors and leave anti-American literature behind them for future reading by the sailors. Continuing, he said:

"The women among the visiting radical groups—and there are usually two or three—make dates with the seamen for their shore liberty periods and then attempt to convert these newly-acquired boy friends to Communism, or at least urge them to attend Communistic meetings and lectures, hoping, thereby, ultimately to be able to form 'cells' aboard ships through which other 'shipmates' may be worked upon."

A similar method, Admiral Woodward said, is used at shore stations and at Marine barracks throughout the country. The Communists, he added, even follow the men into such places as Y. M. C. A. buildings, poolrooms, and beer gardens.

"Of course," the admiral said, "methods used by the Communists can never bring about a successful revolution so long as the armed forces remain loyal, a fact which history will substantiate.

"A Real Menace."

"Nevertheless, the vicious infection produced by their undermining process has now become a real menace to our national defense. It is causing deep concern, not merely because of the actual past and potential future retardation in the Navy's shipbuilding program, but because communistic activities are likewise extended to civilian workmen at navy yards and other Government stations and to employes of the principal companies furnishing material and equipment to the services in an effort to incite disloyalty, bring about strikes, delay work, or, through deliberate inefficiency, to spoil the work or make it cost more."

Admiral Woodward advocated that college "reds" should be summarily expelled and deprived of citizenship, or, if foreigners, deported at once. Furthermore, he said, all college instructors should be made to take a public oath to uphold the Constitution, and, failing to take such an oath, should be branded as traitors and punished as such.

College Names Five Directors

Hood Selections Made at Midwinter Meeting in Frederick.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 11 (AP). Election of five directors for Hood College was announced today at the mid-winter meeting of the board of directors. A. R. Bredbeck, of Hanover, Pa., president of the college board, presided.

The new directors are the Rev. Ernest W. Brindle, of Arendtsville, Pa.; the Rev. Harry N. Bassler, D. D., of Westminster; the Rev. E. M. Deatrick, of Irwin, Pa., and T. K. Saylor, of Johnstown, Pa., for three years, and the Rev. Ralph E. Hartman, of Frederick, for two years.

Reports of the various board committees were made. It was announced the finances of the college "are in a healthy condition" and an aggressive program of work was being planned for next year.

The board voted approval for the affiliation of the home economics department of the college with the Frederick City Hospital, making possible the offering of additional courses in institutional management and quantity cooking.

Miss Ruth Clayton was added to the faculty as an instructor in the home economics department.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With
C. B. Carr
Post State Editor.

L. D. DORSEY, 48-year-old farmer of Somerset County, Md., is taking no chances of being improperly buried when he dies. He has just completed a "home-made" concrete burial vault for himself, and is now having a carpenter construct a casket of heart of pine wood.

Robust and vigorous Dorsey measured himself carefully to make sure of a perfect fit. He then walked into the shop of Nolan D. Ross, in Westover. Ross, astonished, agreed to take the order.

Dorsey sees nothing peculiar in his preparations and is amused greatly by the exclamations of neighbors over his plan.

Winchester, Va., probably stands in a class few other cities have reached this year. W. A. Baker, city treasurer, reports a cash balance of $44,000 in the city's coffers. He claims that such a balance is largely due to unusual success in collecting money for taxes and other levies.

Numbers gaming throughout Virginia is usually looked upon as nothing but a detriment to a community. Richmond, however, can point to one thing in its favor from the standpoint of the city government's treasury. It has been reported that approximately $5,000 has been collected in fines throughout 1934 from persons charged with having connections with the promotion of the "daily combinations." Although no figures were available, it was believed that this amount represents more money in fines than any other type of violations brought with the exception of traffic fines.

Authorities stated that about 50,000 persons play daily, betting as little as a penny on the combinations.

Fruit Farm Loans Paid In 5 States

Unpaid Sum to Be Met When Stored Apples Are Sold.

Growers' Body Officers to Be Named at Monday Meeting.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Two hundred fruit growers from five States, expected here Monday to attend the annual meeting of the East-Central Fruit Growers' Production Credit Association, will be told that of the $680,677.24 loaned during 1934 to growers in these States, approximately $475,000 has already been repaid. Most of the remainder will be paid when apples in storage.

The annual election of officers will be held at Monday's meeting and directors will be selected from Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginian, Maryland and Delaware, which are in the east-central district of the association. The officers and directors of the association are Phil H. Gold, Winchester, Va., president; J. H. Karns, Chambersburg, Pa., vice president; F. W. Richardson, Wyoming, Del., and Cecil W. Wood, Hedgesville, W. Va. Maryland has had no representative on the board since the recent death of Walter Engler, of New Windsor, Md., whose successor will be elected at Monday's meeting. J. M. Diehl is secretary-treasurer of the association, with headquarters in Hagerstown.

Besides the election of new officers and directors, the annual report will be made for the first year's operation of the association, which was organized for the purpose of handling short-term credit for fruit production purpcses. William H. Johnson, secretary, Production Credit Corporation, Baltimore, will be among the speakers.

The report submitted at the annual meeting by Secretary-Treasurer Diehl will show that Pennsylvania growers, 41 in number, borrowed $230,219 in 1934; 63 Virginia growers, $213,007.47; 26 West Virginia growers, $148,513.75; 15 Maryland growers, $74,713.50, and 9 Delaware growers, $29,526.

Applications thus far in 1935 for loans have totaled $279,998.50, divided as follows: Pennsylvania, 4 growers, $17,800; Virginia, 23 growers, $172,340.50; West Virginia, 3 growers, $14,300; Maryland, 4 growers, $30,940, and 3 in Delaware, $44,618.

Having Run Out of the Year's 'Ten Best,' Here Are the 'Best of the Month'

PreviewGroups Make Selection Of Hit Subjects

Capital Lauds the Choices; We Lose a Local Star; Amusement Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

With echoes of the country-wide critical decision as to the "ten best pictures of the year" still ringing in the Nation's figurative ear, it is interesting to note what a consensus of opinion, as expressed through the Will H. Hays office, has to say about the "best of the month" releases available for January scrutiny.

It seems that the eagle-eyed scouts upon whose superior judgment the Hays organization principally relies—and the Hays organization, of course, would be the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., virtually the heart of the industry—deem these the best pictures that are apt to come to the layman's attention during the first month of the New Year:

"The Band Plays On," an M-G-M production, which to the best of my knowledge has not been seen, nor will be soon, in the Capital.

"Bright Eyes," the new Shirley Temple-James Dunn vehicle opening today at Loew's Palace. (Miss Temple's southern exposure will be found elsewhere on this page as a part of its pictorial embellishment.)

"Broadway Bill," the Columbia release that packed them in to the point of police handling of the crowds at the Earle during the week that closed last night.

Some Not So Hot.

"Imitation of Life," the lugubrious Fannie Hurst yarn in which Louise Beavers almost purloined the major acting honors from the svelte and literate Miss Claudette Colbert.

"The Little Minister," RKO-Radio's thoughtful translation of the Barrie play into terms of celluloid as a starring vehicle for Katharine Hepburn—an item that has engaged the interest of Washington audiences from Christmas Day up to now.

"The Merry Widow," Ernst Lubitsch's amazing galvanization of the ancient operetta by Franz Lehar, which Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier imbued with new life.

This is a list of diversified entertainment with which local picture-goers will find it possible to agree with the voluntary censors who find it eminently good.

The Box-Office Tells!

Personally, we should hesitate to place some of the pictures listed as "the best of the month" in any such superlative category. For instance, we found "Imitation of Life" and "The Little Minister" something less than the commanding works they should have been.

Perhaps our memory runs back a little too far. Particularly in the case of "The Little Minister." There have been infinitely better performances of this enduring play of Sir James Matthew Barrie's than was afforded by Miss Hepburn and John Beal. But as long as the present-day picture-going public was not aware of that fact, their interpretations of two roles that have become almost classic in the native theater probably deserve the acclaim they have received. The Capital's enthusiasm over the play that terminated its run at RKO-Keith's last night, however, may not be said to be typical of the entire country's.

There were spots where "The Little Minister" was a flop—in the purist terminology of show business. In other words, it laid an egg here and there.

If one were to go back and pick up an item that was crowded out of Thursday morning's issue of this eminent mouthpiece of the best thought in contemporary newspaperdom, it would run something like this:

Incidentally, the 'Columbia Players, speaking of local groups, as nobody was specifically, last night attended the performance of "Drama at Inish" en masse at the National. They had planned to do the play themselves, late this month, before the Abbey Theater Players decided certainly upon their Washington repertory, and so they went to see precisely how it should be done. Instead of "Drama at Inish," they are now busily rehearsing another satire, "The Mask and the Face," by C. B. Fernald, for presentation on February 6 and 7. "Drama at Inish," I am led to believe, will come later, because now they have seen "precisely how it should be done."

An Actor Steps Up.

Washington, by all signs, omens and portents, has lost—at least temporarily—one of its most prominent young actors. Howard Whitfield, who has had a considerable number of excellent performances to his credit as producing director of the Hartfield Players and a staff member of the Washington Community Players, has gone to New York to become one of the leading men in the Children's Theater of New York, under the direction of Claire Tree Major.

The Children's Theater of New York, as everyone knows, is an organization of adult players who give dramas especially suited to the entertainment of juvenile audiences. Their seasons at the National on Saturday mornings, approximately once a month during the playing year, are a highlight in the minds of the youngsters of the National Capital.

Whitfield will appear in the leading role of "The Prince's Secret," which, incidentally, is booked for an early Washington engagement in the National.

Early in the present season Whitfield appeared in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" with the Washington Community Players, and in other important roles, notably as Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" last summer at the National Sylvan Theater, and as the March Hare in "Alice in Wonderland."

Mr. Whitfield had entered the Bartfield Players in the annual one-act play tournament to be held in early February. It is expected that a guest director will take charge of the group for the event.

Among the prominent local players who will be seen in the forthcoming Drama Guild production of Maxwell Anderson's "Both Your Houses," a Pulitzer prize winner to be given in Wardman Park Theater on January 16, 17 and 18, will be Maud Howell Smith. Mrs. Smith was an active participator in the organization of the original Community Center drama group from which the present Drama Guild emerged. For many seasons she has played with the National Theater Players, under the management of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the National Theater, and as a member of the Arts Club drama section and various other local dramatic groups, Mrs. Smith has become one of the most notable exponents of the higher expressions of the drama in resident acting circles. Her recent appearance in Eddie Melcher's "44 Below" was something in the nature of a personal triumph. It is a source of gratification to be able to record that Mrs. Smith shares the views of this column in the matter of the stagnant status of the Capital's amateur theater.

The Big Little One.

In another column of this page of today's issue of The Post will be found a likeness of a baby actress whose identity will be immediately apparent, even though her features are not. She is one of the genuine prodigies of the modern cinema, transcending the earlier accomplishments of Baby Peggy, Baby LeRoy and all the other "Babies" that have occupied the Kliegs since the inception of the motion picture as a major instrument of mass entertainment.

Directors, script writers, technicians and actors marvel at the manner in which Shirley Temple, 5 years of age, is able to memorize her lines and stage "business" and be letter-perfect when called before the camera and microphone.

A majority of them ask Mrs. Gertrude Temple, the tiny star's mother, how she has been successful in training Shirley to accomplish this considerable mental feat. Most of them have the mistaken idea that Shirley has been schooled by a tedious process of memorizing long poems or stories which she has been required to recite back by rote.

Shirley Not "Crammed."

This is by no means the case. Mrs. Temple states with some emphasis that she has never forced her small daughter to memorize poetry, prose or anything else in words that might tax her patience and photographic memory. In fact, this device has been avoided assiduously.

Shirley's ability to remember lines and grasp their dramatic significance is her own special endowment and is as much a mystery to her mother as to all the rest of the admiring world.

Not only does Shirley always know her own lines, but most of the time she is able to prompt her adult associates whose memories are not nearly so infallible as her own.

Identification Note.

You have heard of the "Temple of the Titillating Tintypes?"

Well, Shirley is it!

4-H Club Names Heads.

Slydell Stevens was elected president of the Jolly Workers 4-H Club, of Fairland, Md., at its annual meeting. Lillian Duvall was named secretary, and Irene Roby, treasurer. New committees named include publicity, Jean Roby, chairman; recreation, Nancy Lank and Mildred Duvall, and program, Jeanette Stevens and Seville Roby. Mrs. Edgar L. Roby has been named leader of the club to succeed Mrs. Charles E. Berry.

Stars of Films Opening Today

As the third production of their repertory week, the Abbey Theater Players presented last evening the single performance of Sean O'Casey's "Juno and the Paycock," once more proving that the United States has no corner on histrionic dramaturgic ability.

To an American audience, the play seems slow and verbose, which faults are accentuated by the unusual accent with which the lines are spoken. However, as the ears become attuned to the perfected diction of the players and as one gets into the spirit of the play, the whole resolves itself into a smooth-running piece which balances, though abruptly at times, boistrous comedy with poignant tragedy.

Essentially the plot revolves around the life of the Boyle family, "Captain" Jack, a rather likeable old toper, and Juno, his long-suffering wife, who bears the brunt of the family's misfortunes, and their son and daughter.

Eileen Crowe gives a beautiful interpretation of this modern Juno Moneta, guardian of the Boyle finances—when there were any. Barry Fitzgerald, as the irresponsible, drink-loving father, did a great job. Aideen O'Conner and Arthur Shields were the other members of the family.

The play, laid during the sporadic civil strifes about 1922, leaned heavily to political references, with many a jab at formal religion. Despite these references, which for the most part were of small moment, the play's great delight was the impersonation of Miss Crowe, a role whose playing increased in depth and power as the drama progressed.

Masonic Lodge Given Relic of Washington

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The local Masonic Lodge was presented with a framed apron, bearing the name of George Washington of Fredericksburg, Va., a descendant of President George Washington, last night. It was presented to the late Fred L. Weltzheimer when he attended a meeting of the Masonic Lodge in Fredericksburg, Va., during the recent bicentennial.

A number of local Masons were presented with aprons, but this special one is the only one bearing the signature of George Washington.

First Robin!

Bees, Dandelions Also Hint of Spring at Hagerstown.

Paul Sprecher and Junior Shubert, while walking along a rural road, heard a robin chirping. The bird was sitting high on a locust tree.

Dandelion, which usually sprouts at the approach of spring, has already made its appearance on the city market.

The unseasonable weather of the past week is held responsible.

Honeybees also were reported seen flying around within the corporate limits.

Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 9.

GEORGE BRENT and Ralph Forbes are to be the two male leads in "The Goose and the Gander," with Kay Francis. This may seem like an ordinary casting item, but I believe there's more drama in it than perhaps the scenario itself . . .

George and Ralph are the two former husbands of Ruth Chatterton. She left Ralph for George but soon after they were married Brent and Forbes seemed very friendly, and the three of them—husband, wife and former husband—made a trio seen about town. After Brent and Chatterton separated, George and Ralph were not seen together. In fact it was even suspected that Forbes and Miss Chatterton might get together until he suddenly eloped and married Heather Angel. Now the two former husbands who stopped speaking are to be thrown together. It will be interesting to watch. Oh, yes, according to the scenario, it is Forbes who tries to take the gal away from Brent; so they will not be playing familiar roles.

They needed a rain sequence for "One More Spring," and since it is now the rainy season in sunny Hollywood, Director Henry King decided to have his players wait for a genuine downpour. Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are in Central Park in the rain. And with real rain they could play the scene in the outdoor garden set at Fox and save the cost of a large set. Director King waited three days and the sun continued to shine. He couldn't wait any longer. The set was constructed overnight. The performers went to work in a large artificial downpour on the set. Yes, you've guessed it. That day it rained a flood and the downpour didn't cease for two days.

William Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is to be presented in the flickers as it was never presented anywhere before. It is permissible to take liberties with the bard, all Shakespearean troupes delete and rearrange. But none have ever added characters to a play. In the screen play of "Midsummer Night's Dream" there is to be an added character—there will be a Mrs. Bottom. Mr. Bottom, played by James Cagney, is to have a wife.

While filming his last sequence with Marlene Dietrich, Director Von Sternberg would say to her in German before he began a scene: "Don't forget this is the last picture we will make together." And Marlene would shout back: "No, no." It may be that she really meant it, or perhaps she was trying to humor Director Von Sternberg, for she seems excited that Lubitsch is to direct her next flicker . . . Marlene is now taking a little rest for, as they say about the studio, "Sternberg worked the pants off her." Since she is noted for wearing trousers, the saying applies.

• • • •

Charlie Chaplin will probably feature a sequence in color in his flicker tentatively titled "The Waif" . . . Ben Bernie, George Raft, Grace Bradley and Iris Adrian, of Broadway and the night clubs, have the leading roles in "Stolen Harmony." On the set the other day Bernie said: "Remember when I played the Palace and Raft came on to do one dance specialty while I conducted the orchestra. I used to give George pointers about facing an audience. He still owes me 15 bucks he borrowed during that engagement, but I've called that square for he's now giving me some pointers about the camera." . . . The crowd gathered at the Dunes was greatly amused when they heard Gilbert Rowland ask for some dark tan powder. He wanted it so he could appear to have a good sun tan.

• • • •

GEORGE WHITE is at it again. White always furnishes plenty of action when he is making a flicker. The other day he had a fight with Jack Donahue, who is directing the dance numbers for "Scandals." White, the hoofer, didn't like the dance routines, and told Jack so. Donahue is no longer directing the dances. James Tinling, who is listed as the director of "Scandals," informed White that he doesn't want his name on the screen as director. He claims he isn't directing the flicker—that White is. There are five little chairs on the "Scandals" set, and each one is labelled director.

They previewed "David Copperfield" as if it were the premiere. There were arc lights, spotlights, a red carpet on the sidewalk and more celebrities than at the biggest Broadway opening. The preview crowd gave Director George Cukor a bigger hand than it gave Charles Dickens. David Copperfield is played by an English child, Freddie Bartholomew. Before the preview, Freddie's mother walked into his room to see if he was dressed and ready to go. She saw Freddie kneeling at his bed and praying. In a low voice Freddie said: "Oh, please—please—let David Copperfield and me be hits."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall Thursday night; Frances Nash, soloist; Hans Kindler, conductor. Program: Ballet Suite (Rameau-Mottl), Symphony in A major (Beethoven), Piano Concerto in D minor (MacDowell), "Finlandia" (Sibelius).

Seizing, as he whimsically said, the very first opportunity to break his New Year's resolution that he would make no more speeches from the podium, Dr. Kindler addressed the audience before conducting the final number of the program, and by that act caused this review to start at the end instead of the beginning. For his remarks, compounded of gratitude for the support which has made the orchestra's existence possible and of confidence that the aid will be continued in the cause of good music in the Nation's Capital, gave an unexpected significance to the evening's enjoyment.

After briefly reviewing the growth of the organization through its infancy, when sceptics doubted that it would be able to survive, and pointing to the steady increase of attendance as evidence that its welfare is the concern of the community, he asked that liberality be the attitude of all music-lovers when the annual campaign for the sustaining fund begins. He gave concrete examples of the difficulties with which the musicians contend, and asked that a more generous budget be provided to alleviate their situation.

His appeal was answered with a burst of applause that augured well for the future. And his men expressed their loyalty in a performance of the "Finlandia" that pursued an eloquent course to the triumphant climax.

The concert began with the charming simplicities of the minuet, musette and tambourin which Felix Mottl arranged from the ballet music of Jean Philippe Rameau. Graceful in form and unburdened by any programmatic meaning, the dances were a pleasant introduction to that symphony of Beethoven's which seemed to Wagner's discerning eye "the apotheosis of the dance."

To the cheerful surrounding in which Beethoven lived during the summer of 1811 in Toeplitz some commentators have attributed the unclouded atmosphere of the seventh symphony. The supposition is not improbable, for the writing shows few signs of introspection, and its mood is anything but contemplative. Its vitality brings refreshment to those who hear it, for it abounds in that irresistible energy of good humor which Beethoven expended in his hours of relaxation.

Frances Nash gave a brilliant performance of the concerto upon which Edward MacDowell lavished a technical scintillance frankly borrowed from Liszt, as far as the solo instrument is concerned. The piano is placed in a virtuoso role, and the executant is called upon for dynamic power, dextrous speed and digital ingenuity. These demands Miss Nash met with a competence assured and admirable.

Her tone was crisp and clear, the dynamics were finely adjusted, and the performance moved with an exciting elan. In those passages which allowed the leisure for poetic coloring of tone, she used the delicacy of touch and the lyric impulse that brought out their beauties.

Virginia Apples Helped in West

Horticultural Club Official Leaves for Tour to Open Domestic Markets.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Of interest to Virginia fruit growers is announcement that W. S. Campfield, secretary of the Virginia State Horticultural Society, left Staunton last night on a tour of markets in the Middle West.

Mr. Campfield's first stop was in Cincinnati. Markets at Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Lafayette, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Danville, Springfield, Peoria, Rockford, Chicago and St. Louis, Mo., will be visited in an endeavor to persuade buyers of apples there that the Virginia fruit is cheaper because of advantages in shipping.

The tour is the second taken by Mr. Canfield in an endeavor to find additional outlets for the fruit which hitherto has been in good demand abroad, but little of which now crosses the ocean due to foreign restrictions.

Last October the society sent its secretary on a trip into the South.

Larrity Garrison Said to Have Been Injured During Dispute.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Larrity Garrison, 40, Albemarle farmer who lived near Mission, died en route to a hospital after he had been found in an unconscious condition on Frazier Mountain.

Authorities today were holding Luther Frazier, 19-year-old Greene County youth of Frazier Mountain, on charges of inflicting severe head injuries that caused the man's death.

Garrison was found by Luther Morris, of Swift Run, and Hobart Shifflett, of Mission Home, who rushed him to the University Hospital in a vain effort to save his life.

They told Greene County authorities that Frazier struck Garrison over the head with a table leg during a dispute at Frazier's house, and that Frazier "tried to borrow a shot gun to finish him."

They said Garrison lay in the open all night, and that his son, Larrity Garrison, jr., remained with his father throughout the night and built a fire at his side.

It was said that young Garrison witnessed the assault on his father and reported the affair to William Sullivan, justice of the peace of Greene County, who arrested Frazier and placed him in jail in Stanardsville, pending a thorough investigation of the case.

Virginia Airs New Set-up Today

Board of Visitors Also to Meet to Consider Probers' Report.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Alumni and governing groups of the University of Virginia are expected to take some direct action here tomorrow in connection with the university's long debated athletic tangle.

More than 50 delegates from 14 widely scattered alumni chapters have been designated to attend a special meeting tomorrow morning for the purpose of developing an alumni program for the administration of athletics, and to consider methods intended to restore Virginia's failing athletic prestige.

The board of visitors, governing body of the university, also will meet in the morning to begin an official study of a special committee report calling for a sweeping reorganization of the entire athletic structure. The report was submitted several months ago by a group of four faculty members and two alumni, appointed about a year ago by President John Lloyd Newcomb and instructed to devise a plan for a more efficient administration of athletics.

Consolidation Urged.

The committee proposed in the report that all athletic activities be consolidated under absolute faculty control, and that a "dean of athletics" be appointed to direct the new set-up. It further recommended that all direct alumni and student participation in athletic affairs be abolished.

A third meeting, a joint session among members of the president's committee and the board of managers of the general alumni association, also is scheduled for tomorrow to discuss the athletic report.

Expressions of alumni sentiment have already been voiced in local chapter meetings during the past several weeks. The Lynchburg chapter started the movement for the general meeting on December 3, when that group met with prominent alumni from other sections to outline a program.

Continuation of Council.

Resolutions adopted at the Lynchburg meeting call for the continuation of the athletic council, which controls athletic policies, and whose membership is composed of three representatives from the faculty, three from the alumni, and three from the student body.

The Lynchburg chapter also proposed that the director of athletics "shall not be a member of the faculty and shall be appointed by the president of the university only when previously nominated by a vote of two-thirds of the entire membership of the athletic council."

The Lynchburg group incorpo-

S. C. Appoints McCallister as Grid Coach

Toledo Prep Mentor Is Pick to Succeed Billy Laval.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 11 (AP).—The University of South Carolina athletic advisory board tonight unanimously elected Don McCallister, 31-year-old Toledo (Ohio) High School athletic coach, as head coach of athletics at the university, subject to confirmation by the board of trustees.

Under the usual procedure here, McCallister would appoint his own assistants in all sports. He was not in the city at the time of his election and no announcement as to the personnel of the assistants was forthcoming from other quarters except that McCallister would name them.

It was generally understood, however, that the new coach might bring Frank Pauly, his 290-pound line coach at Toledo, with him, and reports had it that Assistant Coach A. W. (Rock) Norman might remain as basket ball, track and freshman coach.

Teammate of Grange.

A former teammate of Red Grange, McCallister played football and basket ball at the University of Illinois before his graduation in 1926. He previously had captained teams in three major sports at Carmi (Ill.) High School.

Turning to high school football coaching upon graduation, he produced teams that won 81 of 90 games. Three went through their seasons undefeated. They lost but 4 of 59 games in the past six years.

After coaching at Palatka (Fla.) High School in 1926 and 1927, McCallister turned out football teams at Miami High School in 1928, 1929 and 1930, then coached at Waite High School for the past four seasons.

Succeeds Laval.

As the successor to the veteran Billy Laval, head coach at South Carolina for the past seven years, McCallister faces a football schedule of nine and possibly ten games, including Duke, Clemson, Washington and Lee and V. P. I., with a squad that lost a dozen seniors and 1934 freshman material that looked none too good.

Horse Wins First Time, Pays $228

New Orleans, Jan. 11 (AP).—Doc Oster, 3-year-old chestnut colt owned by Mrs. L. A. Oster, made his first victory at the Fair Grounds an important one today as he galloped home first in the second race, a $400 claiming affair at 6 furlongs for maiden 3-year-olds, and paid $228 for a $2 ticket.

He started only twice as a 2-year-old and today's race was his first since officially becoming a 3-year-old on January 1.

Dogentine was second under the wire to pay $10.40 and $5. Mapan was third and paid $2.80.

Old Line Five Bows; Boxers Triumph

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A SHARP-SHOOTING Duke basket ball team that had more of a punch than Virginia Military Institute's boxers, spoiled Maryland's first double-header of the season by winning over the Terps, 48-39, last night at College Park before a throng of 5,000 fans.

But the Cadets did not get off so easily. Maryland's experienced and alert leatherlpushers hit them with everything allowed by the rules and waltzed home with a 6-2 decision. Three knockouts, one the real McCoy, produced by Stew McCaw, Southern Conference 175-pound champion, featured the program.

Duke's tossers not only came from behind to lead, 19-16, at the half, but pulled away in the final ten minutes of play to win, after the battling Terrapins had tied the score at 29-all. The Dukes presented one of the finest, best-coached elevens to show in the vicinity this season.

Jimmy Young Winner.

Little Jimmy Young started Maryland down the road to its boxing victory with a clear-cut decision over Will Cavedo in the 115-pound class. The Cadet took the first round, but Weller won the second and clinched the fight with a knock down in the third.

Ross Eastman put V. M. I. back in the running with a decision over Bill Waller. Eastman's left jab also was his most effective weapon. Waller rallied in the final canto, but the Virginian was too far out in front to lose.

Ivan Nedomatsky, Maryland's business-like 135-pounder, gave the fans their first kayo of the evening, pounding Frank Trant into submission with a long left hook that usually found a landing place on Trant's head.

The next Cadet to fall in the face of Maryland's withering rain of leather was Curtis Burton who succumbed to Walter Webb's steady drumming to the pit of his stomach. Only Burton's fighting courage kept him on his feet to the end.

McAboy Stops Foe.

Lyman McAboy, a combination of Maxie Baer and a stake-driving machine, floored Bob Boyd in the second and won on a technical kayo when the V. M. I. lad rose to his feet unable to continue. McAboy, as clever as last season, was much too good for his opponent.

Jack Herbsleb won over Randy Whittle, V. M. I. ace in a slow bout, but McCaw injected new life into the proceedings with a right hook to Arnold's mid-section that put the Cadet down and out. McCaw, the conference champion at his weight, hit Arnold so suddenly and swiftly that half the assemblage failed to see the blow.

Carl Stalfort's attempt to add another point to his team's score was thwarted by the heavy and well-timed punching of Jack Oakley, V. M. I. heavyweight, who drove the Terp before him throughout the entire bout.

Maryland Takes Lead.

The Terps got off to a running start and led Duke by an 11-4 score in the first seven minutes of play. Duke's first stringers, sitting on the bench, were calmly analyzing their opponents' defense and when Coach Eddie Cameron finally dispatched the real Duke team, Maryland's lead melted like the proverbial snowball.

But Maryland made a fight of it and managed to remain in the lead until Sam Bell's long pot shot knotted the count for the fifth time at 16-all. This same Bell sank one from the side after Polack converted a foul, presenting the Blue Devils with a 19-16 advantage at the intermission.

Duke unwrapped a more potent

Sports Great Of '23 Still In Picture

Jones, Sarazen Threats; Tilden, 42, Loses None of Old Glamour.

Ruth May Yet Return; Helen Wills' Plans Presage Drama.

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP).—An even dozen years make a whale of a difference, viewed from any angle of the American scene, but it doesn't seem to dim the head-line value of some of the all-time stars of our sporting stage.

The pages of chapter 1923 in the athletic volume glittered with the exploits of Babe Ruth, Bobby Jones, Helen Wills, Tommy Hitchcock, Bill Tilden and Gene Sarazen. All were then at the crest or nearing it while the toms-toms were being beaten for "the golden era" of sport. The setting and the circumstances have shifted sharply, since then. A brand-new crop of performers now holds most of the championship heights, but 1935 finds all of these glamorous figures ready to step into the new year's spotlight.

May Sign Again.

Ruth insists his playing days as a regular are done. The experts agree with him, but the Babe may change his mind—as he has done before—and sign another player contract with the Yankees if, as now appears likely, it develops there is no chance of his landing a major league manager's job this year. Ruth demonstrated to the Japanese that he still packs the wallop that made him baseball's biggest drawing card.

Jones, ending his retirement last spring to take a licking from his professional golf rivals, hopes to recapture his putting touch and make it much closer when he challenges the touring brigade again this April in Augusta. The chances are he will do so. On any occasion when he has the putting range, Jones is still the most dangerous shotmaker in golf, amateur or pro.

May Be Real Menace.

Sarazen, whether or not he accepts the old issue with Jones, must take the come-back trail. Since his big campaign in 1932, when he captured both the British and American Open titles, Gene has tossed away at least two major championships by carding unlucky sevens. If he can shake off this jinx, he will be the main menace this year to such defending pro champions as Henry Cotton, Paul Runyan and Olin Dutra.

Of all the old heroes who have defied the challenge of time and more youthful rivals, Tilden takes the palm. Big Bill was 27 when he first won the national amateur crown. He's past 42 now. The tip was out that the Old Master was slipping fast, but the results of his latest professional barnstorming tour fail to show it. In three successive nights, Tilden has played upward of 20 sets against youngsters who were in knee pants when he was a world champion. He is still the greatest shotmaker in tennis and he probably won't quit until they carry him off the courts.

Dramatic Prospects.

The anticipated return of Helen Wills Moody to national competition carries with it some highly dramatic prospects. She hasn't played in a tournament since defaulting in the third set of the women's tennis final to Helen Jacobs at Forest Hills in 1933. She hardly would attempt a comeback unless satisfied she could regain her old stroking power and skill, in which event it would by no means be far-fetched to expect a meeting of the two California rivals in the title round of this year's national championship. Miss Jacobs has won the title three straight times and would welcome an opportunity to defend it against Mrs. Moody.

It remains to be seen whether head injuries in the past two seasons have cut short the career of the celebrated Tommy Hitchcock, who withdrew from polo last August after a bad fall. In any event, his reign as a 10-goal star, which has lasted 13 years, is likely to end next week.

Lester Stoefen on Air.

It may not be news when a tennis player is active over a network, but many vocal volleys were sent zooming into the ether last night as lanky Lester Stoefen made an appearance on a WJSV microphone and revealed the secrets of his sensational tennis success.

N. Y. U. Downs Georgetown, 37 to 21

Violets Off Form, but Win With Ease Before 2,000 Fans.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP).—Georgetown University became victim No. 23 as the all-conquering New York University basket ball team won handily, 37 to 21, on its home court tonight. It was largely through the efforts of Capt. Sid Gross, with 7 goals, that the Violets won so easily, for they played their poorest ball of the season.

It was fully four minutes before either team scored at the start of thegame. After Gross opened with his first two goals, Rubenstein added 5 points more. Donald Gibeau tallied the first Georgetown goal from midcourt after 14 minutes of play.

Ed Hargaden made 9 points to lead the Hoya attack. Both teams missed numerous set-up shots in the crowded University Heights gymnasium. Two thousands spectators, the largest on the Violet court this season, were on hand to view the team, which already has beaten Notre Dame and Kentucky.

Leads, 18-to-9, at Half.

The score at half-time was 18-to-9 in favor of N. Y. U. The victors added 13 points, to 3 for Georgetown, in the second half until Coach Cann put his second, followed by his third team, into the line-up. Then Georgetown pulled up, but not enough to overcome the Violet lead.

Leesburg Boys, Girls Winners on Court

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.)—The Leesburg boys and girl basket ball teams defeated Upperville in the third series of the Northern Virginia League games here tonight. The girls, showing remarkable teamwork, defeated Upperville, 43 to 16. The score in the boys game was 28 to 15. The Upperville boys made no score in the first half.

Grant Humbles Sidney Wood In 3 Sets

Advances to Miami Finals; Bell Is Pressed by Hendrix, 17.

MIAMI, Jan 11 (AP).—Bryan M. Grant, jr., of Atlanta, today evened his score with Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York, by whipping the limber singles ace of the Davis Cup squad, 8—6, 6—1, 6—0, in the semifinals of the Miami Biltmore Tennis Tournament.

In the day's other tilt, Berkeley Bell, of New York, No. 7 nationally, and winner of seven tournaments in the whirlwind 1934 season, found the going difficult but managed to beat back the challenge of 17-year-old Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, 7—5, 6—4, 6—4.

Going into today's match, Wood had a 2 to 1 edge on "Bitsy" in tournament victories. Grant's only credit was scored in the 1933 Seabright, a year after Wood had won over the Atlantan at Newport and Southampton.

First Set Is Close.

Only the first set was close, with Wood holding his own in back-court exchange and neither forging more than a game ahead until Grant broke Wood's service at love in the fourteenth game, to take the set.

Wood, America's second ranked player, was clearly short on practice outdoors, lacking control with his ground strokes off both sides.

Big Bill, Vines Again Win Doubles

3,000 Watch Matches, Others Are Refused Admittance.

Vines Conquers Stoefen in Singles Set-to by 7-5 and 6-1.

In the opening match of Washington's second big indoor tenis exhibition Lott defeated Tilden, 6—3, 6—4, before a crowd of close to 3,000.

Long before the match opened, the big athletic house was jammed to its capacity while fans milled around the entrance clamoring for admission.

Lott's victory put him one up on big Bill, he having won in three sets in Philadelphia Thursday night.

Unable to Match Pace.

Tilden, perhaps weakened by 15 sets of blistering tennis in two nights was unable to match the pace of the bitterest rival of his tennis career.

For the first six games Tilden broke even, but Lott ran out the set from 3-all.

The crowd was restless and noisy and both Tilden and Lott were fluent with sarcastic remarks as the crowd protested against those striving to find seating space where there was none. Lott also ran out the second set from 3-all. The net game of the younger was proving the difference between the two men.

Break Through For Set.

Vines and Tilden were always in the lead in the doubles despite sensational volleying and smashing by Stoefen. With the score 7 and 7 Tilden took a service with the loss of but one point and then he and his partner broke through Lott for the set. The second set found Lott again losing his service in the crucial twelfth game and Vines and Tilden had their victory.

Displaying the best tennis of the evening, in a slambang match, Ellsworth Vines defeated Stoefen, 7-5, 6-1.

Peters, '34 Champion, Loses Apprenticeship

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP).—The apprenticeship of little Maurice Peters, 1934 national champion jockey, came to an end today in a blaze of glory as he rode Sun Archer to victory in the feature race at Santa Anita Park.

The 5-year-old gelding owned by Bert Barroni, won by a length in the La Jolla Handicap of 6 furlongs, in 1:13 1-5 seconds over a slow track. He paid $11.60, $5.20, and $3.20.

Virginia U. Students Indorse Sports Scholarships in Vote

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—On the eve of the alumni meeting on athletics here tomorrow, University of Virginia students today voted overwhelmingly in favor of granting "scholarships primarily for athletic ability" in a student and faculty poll on athletic questions conducted by College Topics, student newspaper.

Out of 1,394 ballots cast, 920 students agreed that "we should attempt to build up football teams by granting certain scholarships primarily for athletic ability." The remaining votes were split up among five other alternatives, giving the scholarship proposal a 2-to-1 majority over the entire field.

Only 7 faculty members out of 69 voting favored the scholarship proposal, and, on other questions, none voted for professionalized football, 14 favored the present policy, 23 wanted an easier football schedule with strictly amateur teams, and 12 voted to abandon football altogether.

Both students and faculty favored staying in the Southern Conference. The student vote was 860 to 484, while the faculty was nearly evenly divided, with 24 for and 21 opposed.

Student votes on the other questions were: 140 to maintain the present policy, 144 to play an easier schedule with strictly amateur teams, 78 to professionalize football play, and 87 to abandon football.

The students rejected the recommendations for a new athletic set-up drawn up by a special committee appointed by President John Lloyd Newcomb by a vote of 595 to 528. The faculty indorsed the report, 39 to 9.

Arakay Wins to Pay $142.40; Kuvito, Second, Is Disqualified

Master Lad, 3-5, Is Left At Post

Choices Dominate Card; Apprentice J. Bryson Is Suspended.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 11 (AP).—There was no feature race carded here today, but the fifth event, a one-mile test for 3-year-old platers, provided as much excitement as any one race at the meeting. Master Lad, the 3-to-5 favorite, was left at the post in a bad start; Kuvito was disqualified from second place because of crowding several horses near the finish line, and Arakay, one that has not been close since his winning effort at Rockingham September 26, won by a half-length in a blanket finish to pay $142.40 for a $2 ticket.

With Kuvito set back, the place went to Contrast, while Air Line was awarded third money and Queen Vic fourth. Master Lad beat one horse.

Apprentice Jockey J. Bryson, who rode Kuvito, was suspended for the balance of the meeting by the stewards.

Considered a Cinch.

Favorites had won the first four races and Master Lad was considered as big a cinch as there was on the card. He was unprepared when Bill Hamilton sent the field on its way and apparently was eliminated. However, Cal Rainey sent the gelding after the field with a rush and the favorites saving ground, drew up with the leaders at the head of the stretch.

Air Line, which had led to this point, faltered as Arakay flashed a great burst of speed to take command. Kuvito came along on the outside in the last sixteenth and swerved in, causing a jam that involved several horses, including Master Lad, on the rail. The first four horses to finish could have been covered with a blanket.

Minna Is Victorious.

Minna, after a long string of futile efforts, found a field she could beat in the 6-furlong dash that opened the program. Always close to the pace, the filly hooked up with Dove of Peace and Cooney in a hair-rasing drive through the last 50 yards and prevailed by the shortest of margins over Dove of Peace. The latter was another nose before Cooney. The placing judges became befuddled over the third placing and first awarded the show to Lady Montreal, which dropped far back after setting the pace. But after a few minutes the error was rectified. Minna was a $5.30 favorite.

Secret Tryst, paying $5.50, was the second favorite in a row to score by a nose. The gelded son of Tryster, well handled by Nick Wall, lasted just long enough to take the second purse from the fast closing Standout. The latter had only a half length advantage over Kibiter.

Mayvite Pays $3.30.

The parade of winning choices continued with the running of the third event. Mayvite, at $3.30 for $2, dominated the running for the entire trip and coasted home by four lengths. Murmuring broke poorly, but ran an impressive race, reaching a contending position on the back stretch and gaining the place by a head from Happy Hopes, another that was slow to find his stride.

Towson extended the favorites' winning streak to four in a row. Taking a good lead after the first quarter-mile, the colt breezed along with nothing to fear. His winning margin was three lengths and his price just under 2 to 1. The Anead, second choice in the betting, might have fared better with stronger handling. Shalot, an outsider, was third.

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 11.

With the suspensions of Meade, Wright and Bryson, the local riding colony has lost four of the best riders. Eddie Arcaro, who has been going great guns hereabouts, is on the injured list, although he is about ready for work. He tried to do some riding on a motorcycle and the thing threw him, the jockey suffering a badly smashed snoozle as the result. Wright leaves a mark of 20 winners for the other boys to shoot at and it is likely that his collection will stand. The meeting has only four more days to run. Arcaro has 13 winners to his credit here. Little Georgie Watson, brother of Bobby, has 11 on his string, while Gilbert boasts of 9, Parvin 7 and Lynch 6. Yesterday marked the largest day of the session here from a betting standpoint, when $195,090 passed through the machines. Clocker Mike and Trainer Joe are still arguing about that foot race, and I'm going to chase them into the everglades if they don't quit putting the jinx on our horses. However, we have yet to be shutouts here in Florida, which is something. BILL.

First race—James City comes to the races for the first time after a series of good works. Appears to have as much chance as anything in the race. Hunter will do the riding. Closing Time, breaking off the rail, is said to be a promising youngster. Wha Hae for the show.

Second race—Dancing Boy has that fine recent effort to recommend him and with Gilbert aboard should take care of this field. Repeal ran that race I had been awaiting the other day and he collected only second money. This shorter route might suit. Modern Ace scratched to await this test and should go well.

Third race—Secret Tryst might win right back if sent out again after today's win. Salisbury, now that the track has been regraded, might like the going. With a strong ride he will be hard to beat. Cabochon likes the mile and is a possible surprise.

Fourth race — Wedding Ring shares top weight in this sprint with two others. Clocker Mike has reported the veteran ready to step down and I'm stringing along. Scotch Gold has been doing well and will not be far out of it here. Our David could be troublesome off that best race.

Fifth race—The Creech Entry of Desert Call and Crackle seems to have a strong grip on this purse. Both are fit and ready. Feudal Lord appears to be the horse for the entry to beat. Volta Maid has some good races and is dangerous.

Sixth race—Sabula may stage a grand wake-up here at the expense of the favorite bettors. Gets top weight, but is in much better form than that recent effort shows. Earl Porter, with Earl Porter in the saddle, will have something to say about the purse distribution. Major General is far too fit to be far away from the front.

Seventh race—There's speed and more speed in this field which competes at 5½ furlongs. Despite the fact that he hasn't been out for some time, I'm taking Evergold. The veteran will like the short distance and S. Renick may make him step. Hope To Do for the place and Wise Prince for the show.

Eighth race—Long Bit, Chance Flight and Doris B. to take care of the "We-beat-each-other" group in the final.

Episcopal Five Opens With Friends Today

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School's basket ball schedule opens tomorrow when the Cherry and Black squad entertains the Friends' School, of Washington.

Coach Fleming seems to be satisfied with the work of Al Wilson, of football fame; Tyler Wilson and Bill Davidson. These three seem to be certain starters in the guard and center positions. The two forward berths are wide open, with a number of candidates working for them.

MAYVITE was much the best. She just galloped along in front to the stretch, where she drew out and won under wraps. MURMURING came with a rush. HAPPY HOPES closed a big gap from a slow beginning. CUDGELDOE well up all the way. SCOTLAND BEAUTY tired in final three furlongs.

TOWSON was sent to the front when ready and just galloped along, winning under wraps. THE AENEAD was poorly ridden and closed gamely on his own courage. SHALOT displayed good speed and was next best. SASSENACH closed some ground. BROKEN UP suffered early interference. VALISE was knocked back on turn.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,250. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:12½. Off at 4:15½. Winner, Silver Stock Farm's b. g. ARAKAY trailed far back to the final three furlongs, came around field, took lead at sixteenth pole and held on gamely. KUVITO also came with a rush on the outside and swerved over to the inside, interfering with several horses, for which he was disqualified for foul. CONTRAST was rushed to the front and tired suddenly, but came again at finish. AIR LINE had plenty of early speed and held on well. QUEEN VIC was well up all the way and was caught in the jam at finish. MASTER LAD was unprepared for the start and was left flat-footed. BLACK WATCH, running in his best form, ran into early lead, waved ground and held on gamely. RELATIVITY went up very fast on outside, but hung badly in drive. LIMBUS came through on inside and finished very fast. YELLOW METAL closed a big gap. FLAT ROCK ran a fair race. DODGSON never a factor.

Virginia to Air New Sports Proposals

Alumni, Board of Visitors to Hold Meetings on New Set-up.

rated in its program the student "V" Club's scholarship proposal, which recommends that a "sufficient sum be set aside from the income of the university endowment fund to establish a limited number of valuable scholarships," which are to be granted "to worthy high and preparatory school students on the basis of character, personality, scholastic standing, with the matter of athletic ability an important criterion in making the award."

Backs Centralization.

The Norfolk-Portsmouth chapter supports the movement to centralize all athletics under one responsible head, but opposes faculty rank for the director of athletics and coaches, and asks for the "expression of alumni opinion in all athletic management."

The Miami, Fla., chapter indorsed the "V" Club scholarship proposal and adopted a resolution saying that the athletic director should be supreme in all athletic matters, but that the alumni should have a voice in the selection and term of office of the director.

The Memphis, Tenn., group indorsed the Lynchburg recommendations regarding the athletic director and the "V" Club scholarship plan.

Other chapter groups have adopted resolutions demanding alumni participation in the administration of athletic policies, and several have worked out various plans for awarding scholarships.

By Paul Gallico.

NUREMBERG, Germany, Jan. 3 (By mail).—While vacationing in Rome I found myself unable to pass up the fights one night at the Teatro Jovinelli, which Old World fight club I would like to describe in greater detail in another piece, and I certainly did not regret going, because it was there that I first became acquainted with a thing of beauty, poetry and classic gesture known as the Roman squawk.

Now, I am something of an expert on squawks, otherwise known as protests, beefs, complaints, et cetera, having witnessed every known type of squawk from the glowering thunderous scowl of Babe Ruth correcting an umpire to Joe Jacobs' plaintive ringside yowl of "We was robbed!" But never have I seen anything that in grace, dramatic action and beauty of conception could equal the Roman squawk as enacted after a prize fight at the Teatro Jovinelli.

At that, the affair had a connection with the Western Hemisphere, inasmuch as one of the protagonists, a chap named Bianchini, champion of Italy, was scheduled to leave for America to sell his punches, and he was putting on a sort of farewell show for the local boys with a chap named Mortale, which, translated, sounds very much like death. I couldn't understand them when the weights were announced in Italian, but the boys looked like lightweights to me, possibly 140-pounders.

Has Fine 'Off Night.'

Signor Bianchini was very disdainful and superior in his corner, waiting for the fight to begin, and then treated himself to a fine off night as soon as the bell rang. He is a counter fighter anyway, and for the first four or five rounds he didn't even counter-fight, much less lead.' Mortale, who was supposed to be the farewell victim, gave him a lovely pasting, and on or about the fourth or fifth round hit him on the chin with a left hook and came within an ounce of putting him away.

Bianchini is a pretty good infighter, and he woke up toward the end of the brawl and took a few rounds, but when the thing was over, he was just another favorite who had been licked by the soft touch. The two judges and the referee saw it that way, and when it was over, the announcer, after collecting the sl

Choices Win Interhigh Openers

Techmen Rally at End After 2 Rough Rider Stars Go Out.

STRIKING the first blow in the defense of its inter-high basket ball championship, Eastern High took an early lead over Central yesterday and went on to win an impressive 31-to-24 victory while Tech, favorite to gain the 1935 title, got away to a fast start by trouncing Roosevelt's veteran five, 46 to 33.

A capacity crowd of close to 1,000 watched the old rivals, Eastern and Central, inaugurate inter-high basket ball at Roosevelt High's new gym. Tech and Roosevelt drew an attendance of about 800 at Tech.

Eastern's blue-clad lads stacked themselves to a 13-to-4 lead in the first quarter. Central was never able to slice the advantage to less than five points. At times, the Lincoln Parkers appeared to be coasting through the latter part of the game while at other times the fighting youngsters from Central were forcing Eastern to go at top-speed in order to maintain its lead.

Dean Leads Attack.

Capt. Lavelle Dean, Eastern's All-High guard, paced his team to victory, giving a flashy display of fast shot-making as he looped four from the floor in addition to three free throws. Matching Dean's 11 points, Johnnie Munhall, lone senior in the Central starting line-up, tallied five baskets and a foul to share the scoring honors.

After taking its first quarter lead of nine points as the result of two baskets and a foul by Dean, a couple of double-deckers by Gay Edelin and a pot shot by Chick Hollidge, Eastern held all but two points of the advantage in the second period and led, 16 to 9, at the half.

Central came back in the third quarter to play the champions even. Munhall, Willie Thompson, 6-foot-5-inch center, and Charlie Nau came through with a basket apiece, while Bill Vermillion and Thompson made good on free shots. For Eastern Charlie Scheible and Chick Hollidge scored from the floor, and Scheible, Dean and Hollidge from the free-shot line. Central had closed the gap to 23-17 as the teams went into the final quarter.

Lead Is Widened.

Edelin widened the lead with a neat long shot, but Munhall got it back with a spectacular one-hand heave from the side. Munhall made good on two fouls after Dean sunk another one and it was 27-22 with five minutes to play. Buddy Shaner scored from the floor for Eastern, but Munhall again got the points back from a warm scrimmage under the basket. Chick Colley of Eastern gave the victory a final touch by sinking a fast one-hand shot from near the foul line vicinity.

The crowd was in an uproar as Central kept fighting the titleholders point for point down through the closing minutes, but Eastern's cool passing game, now playing for time, plus that devastating first-quarter attack, had done the damage.

The Tech-Roosevelt tussle was fairly close until the later stages of the game, when Capt. Dave Donovan and Spiro Kolius, the Rough Riders' veteran guard and forward, went out of the game for four personals apiece. Tech had an 8-point lead at the time, but quickly widened it.

Daly Gets 20 Points.

Big Reds Daly, Tech captain, carried the brunt of the Tech offensive, rolling up 20 points, to approach some of the high-scoring marks of series history. Frank Bailey, hastily developed youngster playing in the place of Frank Baroni, who was on the sidelines for ineligibility, was the shining light for the Rough Riders, scoring 12 points.

Baroni's 9 points in the first half kept Roosevelt within striking distance of the flying Techmen, and they had only a 25-to-18 lead at the half. Roosevelt continued to stay in the running in the third period, Tech leading by but 8 points at the opening of the final quarter. The loss of Kolius and Donovan, however, killed virtually all hopes of a Roosevelt rally and Tech won, going away.

Eastern's Ball—One Down, One to Go

Coaching Staff Is Renamed By Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Reappointment for another year of the staff of coaches who last season brought the Navy football team along to its greatest success in recent years, climaxed by the first victory over the rival Army Cadets in 13 years, was announced today by Capt. Robert C. Giffen, director of athletics at the academy.

At Navy 15 Years.

Johnny Miller, former star athlete at St. John's College, Annapolis, has been associated with the physical training department at the academy for 15 years, during which time he has coached along various lines. He is now, and has been for several years, head coach of the varsity basketball team. Rip Miller, of Notre Dame fame, also has done a good job at Navy for several years. First an assistant coach, he served as head mentor for three years until last season when he was made line coach under Hamilton.

The group of coaches for the B squad players and the plebes has not been named. Lieut. Howard Caldwell is slated to be head coach of the plebes. Caldwell was a backfield teammate of Tom Hamilton on the Navy eleven in 1926. Certain changes are required because of the necessity of rotating officers for sea duty. The reappointment of Dr. A. K. Snyder as trainer of the varsity squad also was announced.

F. O. Rezner's False Point, at 7 to 2, was the winner by three lengths from Arthur Sainsbury's Golden Acre.

Baer Welcome In New York

Commission to Insist On 'Qualified' Foes.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Chairman John J. Phelan, of the New York State Athletic Commission, announced after today's meeting that Heavyweight Champion Maxie Baer is welcome to fight 4, 10 or 15 round bouts in the State "against qualified opponents."

Gen. Phelan denied allegations from Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, that the commission is trying to chase Maxie and his larruping fists out of the State.

"Moreover," stated Phelan, "every time Baer steps into the ring—for 4, 10 or 15 rounds—there must be two judges and a referee at the ringside and a decision must be rendered. And Baer's title must be at stake, even though these bouts are not publicized as big title fights."

Consideration of Lightweight Champion Barney Ross was deferred until Tuesday's meeting. Today was the deadline for Ross to accept the challenge of Lou Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y., whom the commission named No. 1 challenger. Phelan pointed out that Ross had until midnight to accept. If he does not accept, it is expected that the commission will vacate Barney's title or suspend him on Tuesday.

G. W. Barely Wins From Elon Five

Visitors Bow, 36-33, After Thrilling Battle; Hero Role to Leemans.

AN unexpectedly strong Elon five last night bowed by a 36-to-33 score to a George Washington basket ball aggregation that lacked the finesse and polish shown against City College, but not before giving the Colonials several of the most anxious moments they have experienced on the court this season.

Playing a close defense that seldom let down, the visitors lacked offensive power in the first quarter in which they scored only two field goals, winding up on the wrong end of a 16-to-8 score at the half. In the second half, Elon outplayed the Colonials throughout, to almost nose them out at the finish.

The first 12 minutes of play found each side scoring only 5 points, but the ultimate winners then acquired a lead which they nursed carefully until the hectic finish, which found Elon within haling distance of victory and sinking shots from every angle as the Colonials weakened.

Visitors Stage Rally.

With but four minutes to play, Bradley, of Elon, on a beautifully executed follow-up shot boosted his team's tally to 30, against George Washington's 33. Then the fun started. Roye sunk a field goal from deep side court to bring the visitors within one point of a tie.

Howell plopped in a free throw, awarded the Colonials when Elon took its fourth time out, to make the score 34 to 32. With less than a minute remaining, both sides started firing a continuous barrage at the baskets.

At this juncture, Tuffy Leemans inserted himself into the picture by regaining a missed Elon shot and dribbling it down the floor to his own end of the court, more to keep Elon from having the ball than with any intention of scoring. Tuffy passed to Keisel, who was fouled in the act of shooting just as the whistle twittered.

Keisel droped in the two free throws awarded him to make the final score, 36 to 33. It was the Colonials' seventh victory in nine starts.

Lower Tax Aim Of Charles Town

Race Track Has Operated at Loss, Officials Say.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Supporters of the Charles Town horse racing track program here are preparing a petition for submission to the States Legislature, now in session, asking for a sliding scale of taxation instead of the existing flat 3 per cent tax on every dollar of mutuel play.

In support of their petition they contend the operation of the track so far has resulted in a net loss. The petition has already acquired a great number of signatures. It contends that although the several race meets held since the opening of the track have brought in $80,000 of taxes to the State, with a total mutuel play of $2,300,000, they have resulted in a net loss on the $150,000 investment.

It states no figures in its petition for a sliding scale, but the plan suggested is pretty well known. Under it the State, instead of collecting the flat 3 per cent on every dollar of mutuel play, would take possibly 1 per cent on a play up to a $25,000 daily total, 2 per cent or so on play from $25,000 to say $40,000, and 3 per cent on all play over $50,000.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan 11 (AP).—Fighting an uphill battle most of the way, University of North Carolina's White Phantoms forged ahead in the last ten minutes of a basket ball game here tonight to defeat Virginia Military Institute, 24 to 19.

The Cadets flashed a bewildering passing game in the first half to run up a 15-to-8 lead at the interval, while holding the Tarheels to three field goals. Nelson, Aitken and Glace scored from the floor and the charity strip early in the second half to tie the score at 16-all. Aitken delivered the points to best the Cadets. Haas tied the score again when he scored the only V. M. I. field goal of the second half.

Again the Tarheels drew away despite repeated scoring attempts on the part of the Cadets.

Good Pro Offer Is Awaited by Caldwell

By Dave Herman.

ERNIE CALDWELL, of Baltimore, will not turn golf professional unless he receives a good offer from some club, the former Middle Atlantic champion said yesterday.

Caldwell vigorously denied the report he had been selected as pro at Hillendale, his home club, as a successor to Carroll MacMaster.

The lanky Hillendale golfer admitted he is more interested in the pro job at Woodholme in Baltimore than at his own club. MacMaster, it is understood, is on his way out at Hillendale, and Warner Mather, owing to illness, will not be retained as pro at Woodholme.

Considered one of the best amateurs in the Middle Atlantic section, Caldwell said he was irked no end when the report got out that he already had turned pro.

Would Remain Amateur.

"If a good offer doesn't come my way, I'll continue to sell insurance and play as an amateur," Caldwell stated.

E. A. Seidl, Hillendale president, also denied any appointment had been made.

Veteran Baltimore links observers said, however, they doubted if Caldwell will be given any of the pro jobs in Baltimore, since he lacks the experience.

Caldwell is 26. In the 1933 National amateur he carried Ross Somerville, champion, to the twentieth hole before losing in the second-round match. He is the co-sharer of the all-time District competitive record of 67 with Maury Nee, George Voight and Miller B. Stevinson. He won the Columbia invitation last season.

Nathan H. Kaufman, of Suburban Club, Baltimore, is due to succeed Robert Stead, jr., of Chevy Chase, as president of the Maryland State Golf Association at its annual meeting next Friday night at the Phoenix Club, 1505 Eutaw place. Only one District man is due to be elected. He is Emmons S. Smith, of Chevy Chase, as vice president.

The complete list of nominations follows:

President, Nathan H. Kaufman, Suburban; first vice president, William D. Waxter, jr., Baltimore C. C.; vice president Baltimore District, Basil Wagner, Green Spring Valley; vice president Washington District, Emmons S. Smith, Chevy Chase; vice president Maryland District, Dr. Karl P. Heintz, Cumberland Country Club; vice president and treasurer, John V. D. Tweedy, Elkridge; secretary, Cooper R. Drewry, Rolling Road.

Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor Club, has been asked by Mrs. C. K. Wing, president of the District Women's Golf Association, to serve again as tournament chairman of the season. Mrs. Simons is expected to make her decision this week. Reports were afloat that Mrs. A. E. Dedicke, of Army and Navy, would be asked to serve as team captain.

Alexandria's Five Winner

Wash.-Lee Bows, 49-39; Apperson Stars.

ALEXANDRIA HIGH SCHOOL made its debut in the Intersuburban League last night, defeating Washington and Lee, 49 to 39, before a capacity crowd in the Ballston gym.

The Twins accomplished a threefold purpose in defeating the Little Generals as the contest was also billed as a Third District encounter and a northern Virginia mythical title contest.

Led by its high-scoring forward, Apperson, the Twins assaulted the host basket with deadly accuracy to pile up a 21-to-6 lead at the half and withstood a gallant rally in the last two periods to coast to victory.

Ex-Louisville Pilot Is Victor in Pay Suit

Durham, N. C., Jan. 11 (AP).—W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, announced today that the association has awarded Albert (Bruno) Betzel a claim of $1,000 against the Louisville club of the American Association.

The money represents what Betzel claims is the balance of his salary as player and manager of the Colonels for the 1934 season. He was released as manager in July of last year.

Warrenton Teams Win.

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Warrenton Athletic Club's teams of girls and boys were both victorious over the Aldie Athletic Club by respective scores of 26 to 5 and 19 to 11.

Baer Matrimony Report Is Denied

Friends Declare He Won't Wed Betty Dumbris.

New York, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Max Baer was dining out tonight and could not be reached for a statement, but friends said there was nothing to reports that the world heavyweight champion contemplated another fling at matrimony.

Rumors that Betty Dumbris, of Chicago and Los Angeles, was in line to succeed Dorothy Dunbar, divorced, as the future Mrs. Baer were denied.

Bucknell Faces C. U. Boxers Tonight

Cardinals on Razor Edge for Opening Matches of Season.

A SQUAD of young, rugged college boys looking for a fight are going to have their ambitions fulfilled tonight at the Catholic University gym where the Red Birds open their boxing season against Bucknell. The first bout will be staged at 8 o'clock.

The visitors' "big guns" are a couple of intercollegiate champions, Capt. Bob Pethick, who picks on lads in the 175-pound class, and Jack Dill, 135 pounds. Dill, however, will not appear tonight, much to the dismay of Ed Thibodeau, C. U. captain, who will fight at this weight.

The other Bisons all the way down the line from Joe Rossati, hard-punching heavyweight, to little Al Peterson, the 155-pound slugger, appear to be capable of taking care of themselves within the roped arena. If Catholic U.'s final workout is any indication of what the boys intend to do tonight, Bucknell can be on its guard.

Hold Brisk Workout.

While workmen labored to erect bleacher seats for last night's tennis exhibition the Cardinals went through a brisk, limbering up drill that should have them at razor edge for the match. Both teams are scheduled to weigh in today at noon.

Catholic U. is banking on Thibodeau, Ruben Miro, 115 pounds; Fred Mix, 145 pounds; Red Fleming, 175 pounds, and Dan Pyne or Fred Rydewski, heavyweights, to snatch the victory. Naturally the others figure in Coach Ed LaFond's carefully laid plans, but these lads are the more experienced and must bear the brunt of the burden.

Box Office Warfare.

Whereas most pro bouts cost at least $1, tonight's fights can be viewed for 85 cents from a reserved seat, or 55 cents from the unreserved section.

The probable line-ups:

Bucknell.	Weight.	Catholic U
Peterson or Earl Herman	155	Miro
Carey	125	Retaino
Beck	135	Thibodeau
Lauerman	145	Mix
Thompson	155	Greco
Valentino	165	Oliver
Pethick	175	Fleming
Rossati	Unlimited	Pyne or Rydewski

scoring punch as the final period got under way and ran its score to 25 before Al Waters potted the Terps' first double-decker of the period. The visitors stretched their lead to 29-21 before Maryland's counter-attack began bridging the gap between the two teams.

Two field goals and a foul by big Vic Willis, another two-pointer tossed by Bill Guckeyson and four consecutive foul shots by Buscher and Guckeyson finally brought the home team abreast of its rival at 29-all. But Duke had not yet unleashed its real guns, as the Terps discovered.

When it did, Maryand was through for the evening, for Bell, Kunkle, Natkenis and Polack literally poured the ball into the hoop and it was only a matter of how large the score would be. Bell scored 10 field goals and a foul to lead both teams in scoring. Willis' 17 points were best for Maryland.

V. P. I. Host to N. C. On Court and in Ring

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Three Virginia Tech teams will open the indoor sports campaign in War Memorial Hall here tomorrow night against powerful court and ring aggregations of the University of North Carolina.

All three events—the varsity court battle and varsity and freshman boxing meets—will be on one card, commencing at 7 o'clock. The odds distinctly favor Carolina in both varsity contests.

Honorary Grid Captain Is Elected by Bethany

Bethany, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Bethany College elected William Nee, of McKeesport, Pa., honorary captain of its 1934 football team. The honor was given in testimony of his playing ability, sportsmanship, character and scholarship.

Six Men Lost To '35 V. P. I. Ring Team

Two Sophomores, Wilson and Hull, Promise to Help Fill Gaps.

By Bill McCormick.

REELING and groggy from the telling blow of losing six of last year's men, the Virginia Polytechnic Institute boxing team will answer the bell for this season's competition practically out on its feet, but battling with courage and tenacity as is its wont.

BUSSEY.

Red Mitchell, 125; Bob Fausel, 145; Joe Russell and Jack Spruill, 165; Nick Dillon, 175, and Warren (Red) Negri, conference heavyweight champion, are the tried and true sock shovers who will not be available for the 1935 warfare.

Don Wilson and Charles Hull, sophomore flyweights, are promising material who may develop into good fighters by the time the conference tournament rolls around next month.

In the 125-pound division will be Freddy Hall, finalist in the conference last year, who was nosed out by Gordon Rainey, of Virginia, for the title. Fighting as he does in a very unorthdox manner, Hall may prove a stumbling block to all competition in his weight class. At least, so thinks Coach Bill Porterfield.

Pushed for Berth.

Jeff Brandon, who formerly tossed leather in the 115-pound division, has graduated into the lightweight ranks. He is being pushed for the berth by George Coston, intramural 135-pound champion.

Two untried recruits, Buddy Herman and Raleigh Powell, are even money choices for the 145-pound position.

Virginia Tech's strongest point probably will be the 155-pound division, in which Granville (Rip) Bussey, last year's captain, will perform. The hard-hitting Roanoke lad is expected to win the majority of his dual meets this season and to figure prominently in the tournament.

Francis Dillon, a sophomore, shows promise as a middleweight. Dillon also specializes in heavy hitting and may develop into one of the surprises of the year with more seasoning.

Lakin Not Available.

Walter Lakin, undefeated freshman lightweight of last year, upon whom Porterfield was pinning much hope for varsity competition, no longer is at Virginia Tech. The 175-pound spot probably will fall to Mel Corbett, of Hot Springs, an untried novice.

Leo Vecellio, of Beckley, W. Va., probably will hold down the heavyweight position. Vecellio also is a rookie whose capabilities have not been tested.

January 19, Catholic University, at Washington; 26, V. M. I., at Lexington (varsity and frosh).

February 2, Virginia, at Charlottesville (varsity and frosh); 9, Washington and Lee, at Blacksburg (varsity and frosh); 22-23, Southern Conference tournament, at Charlottesville.

Va. Medicos Beat American, 33-25

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—Playing their first game of a two-game road trip, the American University Eagles tonight came out on the short end of a 33-to-25 score in a contest with the Medical College of Virginia.

The Eagles, however, managed to gain a 17-to-14 lead at the half. The return to the game of Bob Taylor, star Eagle forward, who was benched for breach of training rules last week, helped the Eagle cause, but was not sufficient to bring victory.

Wheat Values Decline Under Selling Drive

Cotton Losses Recorded on Gold Clause Fears; May Cut to 12.57.

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—Disturbed by increasing attention given to alleged unconstitutionality of gold clause abrogation, grain values pitched downward today, with general selling persistent.

About the lowest prices of the day were reached in the final dealings. Contributing to weakness of all grains was talk that farm use of corn had been officially shown to have adjusted itself to the reduced supply available this season.

Wheat closed wavering, 1⅝ to 2¼ under yesterday's finish; May, 99¼ to 99⅝; corn, ¾ to 2⅝ off; May, 88⅞ to 89; Oats, 1¼ to 2 cents down, provisions at 25 to 40 cents decline.

A feature in the wheat trade was that May contracts tumbled to well below the dollar-a-bushel mark, with May corn off to under 89 cents. Much of the selling both of wheat and corn was ascribed to eastern sources. Misgivings among grain traders caused by legal fighting over the Government's gold policy were noticeably added to by breaks in the New York stock market.

Stop loss selling accelerated grain price tumbles as the day drew to an end.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Uncertainty as to the outcome of the gold clause cases now pending before the Supreme Court, and the weakness in stocks and declines in other markets, had an unsettling effect on cotton today. Prices broke under scattered selling and liquidation with May selling off to 12.53, or 16 points net lower and 31 points below the recent high level. That delivery closed at 12.57, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 11 to 15 points.

The New York Cotton Exchange service reported domestic consumption for December of approximately 425,000 bales, compared with 477,000 in November and 347,000 in December last year.

Exports today, 16,108 bales, making 2,688,871 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 3,400 bales. United States port stocks, 2,975,391 bales.

Protests From London and Other Sources Cause Brazil to Reconsider Decision to Suspend Payments on Foreign Debt.

By Special Writer of The Post.

Protests from London and remonstrances from the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council have caused Brazil to reconsider her recent decision to suspend payments on her foreign debt, and to transfer amounts due at the last moment. However, the funds were obtained by drawing upon exchange reserves needed to pay for imports and to liquidate frozen commercial balances. The result is more protests from business interests and dissension among Government officials in control of exchange operations. In order to reconcile the conflicting interests of long-term and commercial creditors and to put Brazil in a position to acquire needed foreign exchange, a special commission is now on its way to the United States to discuss the problems created by this latest default.

There is no question concerning the inability of Brazil to discharge her obligations, but there is a great deal of dissatisfaction with the methods adopted. The British are especially disgruntled because the arrangements that have been in force for financing current imports are regarded as discriminating against British interests. For instance, there is an official rate of exchange produced by 80 per cent of coffee exports, used to meet the foreign debt service and to finance 60 per cent of Brazilian imports. This 60 per cent import cover has been distributed to foreign countries in accordance with the amount of their coffee purchases. Thus, the United States obtained 46 per cent of the total, France 13 per cent, nine other countries 26 per cent, and all others, including Great Britain, only 15 per cent. Bills of exchange originating through other Brazilian exports have been dealt in at a free rate of exchange varying with supply and demand.

Free Exchange Available For Imports Is Limited.

Thus it will be seen that the system is extremely complicated and the amount of free exchange available for financing 40 per cent of the imports into Brazil is limited and often difficult to obtain. The British buy little coffee from Brazil, and hence are able to secure only a small amount of exchange at official rates. The Bank of London and South America in its annual report to shareholders called attention to the difficulties confronting British shippers, stating that unless the free rate of exchange improved, they must be prepared to quote goods about 20 per cent below the rates charged by countries having a larger share of the official exchange at their disposal.

The handicap under which the British labor is indicated by comparative trade figures covering the first half of 1934 quoted by the London Financial News. United States sales to Brazil during that period amounted to £2,656,500 (in gold), compared with £2,111,900 (gold) for Great Britain. But our imports from Brazil amounted to £6,499,378 (gold) contrasted with only £1,622,212 for Great Britain. Furthermore, Great Britain's favorable trade balance with Brazil is increased by the addition of various invisible items for freights and other services.

It is evident, therefore, why the British protested vigorously when the decision was made to suspend the debt payment and continue to allocate exchange for commercial purposes—a proceeding which benefited the United States chiefly, but did not greatly aid the British. The United States is plainly in a strategic position in negotiating a trade treaty with Brazil as a result of our heavy purchases of coffee, while the British are at a decided disadvantage although they hope that the phenomenally rapid rise in Brazil's cotton production and exports will afford a basis for bargaining.

Latest Figures Indicate Brazil's Trade Is Improving.

Latest figures indicate that Brazil's foreign trade is improving. During the first three quarters of 1934, exports declined somewhat in gold value, it is true, but were quantitatively larger than in the preceding year, while the concurrent decline in the value of imports resulted in a favorable merchandise balance for the nine months' period of over £7,000,000 (gold).

However, in view of the heavily indebted state of the country and the large amounts due under the debt funding agreements, the improvement is not sufficient to warrant continuance of even greatly reduced payments.

Brazil's troubles are of long standing—due to the fact that she is obligated to transfer sums abroad that are in excess of her ability to pay. The deficit in her balance of payments could only be covered by loans which have not been forthcoming. Internal reforms and expansion of exports should ultimately assist the country to resume payments on debt account, but meantime it is necessary to reach some compromise with her creditors. For that purpose, the special financial commission now on its way to the United States has been authorized "definitely to regulate Brazilian-American financial relations and also seek a decisive settlement of the present economic and commercial interchange between Brazil and European countries."

Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 11 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Scattered demand was being received on 64s and finer Western grown wools, but lower grades were draggy. Average and short staple comprised the bulk of the demand for fine wools. Prices were steady at 67@70 cents scoured basis for bulk average to good French combing 64s and finer territory wools, and at 63@65 cents for short French combing and clothing lines. Spot average 12 months Texas wools were having some call at 68@70 cents scoured basis.

Bond Market Irregular as Sales Jump

Gold Clause Case Blamed for Nervousness; Volume at $26,915,000.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—The bond market put on a burst of speed today, but prices developed a high degree of irregularity in the feverish trading.

The hearing of the gold clause case by the Supreme Court was the occasion of some nervousness among holders of secondary liens and most of these were subjected to some pressure on the theory that they would not benefit if the Administration's monetary program is invalidated.

Those United States Government securities and prime corporation loans which would be payable in gold if the high court should reverse the repudiation action of Congress were steady to strong.

The turnover of all bonds amounted to $26,915,000, par value, the largest aggregate for a single day since August 9, last. Of this total Federal issues accounted for some $14,440,000, the heaviest volume since August 22. The Associated Press average for 10 low-yield corporate bonds advanced .26 of a point to a new high at 108.41. The utilities composite was up slightly. The average for 20 rails lost .55 of a point while that for 10 industrials eased .06.

The majority of United States Government issues firmed six-thirty-seconds to twenty-three-thirty-seconds of a point. The principal activity was in the called Liberty Fourth 4¼s and the Treasury 3⅜s of 1941-43. Small losses were suffered by Treasury 4¼-3¼s, 3¼s of 1941 and 1944-46, 3⅛s of 1949-52, Federal Farm 3¾s and Home Owner's Loan 3s and 4s.

In the foreign section the Brazilians improved, but Japanese and German obligations were a trifle heavy.

Price Outlook Is Bright for Commodities

Situation as 1935 Opens Is Best in Four Years; Trend Upward.

New York, Jan. 11.—Continuing the rising trend witnessed in November and December, with only a slight hesitation in the middle of the latter month, the commodity price situation at the beginning of the new year has attained its best position in over four years.

With a marked advance in foodstuffs, the present period marks the ninth successive week in which advances exceeded declines in the regular weekly compilation of wholesale prices, prepared by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

The advances in individual commodities exceeded declines in the ratio of 2½ to 1, the former numbering 35 and the latter 14, as compared with 20 and 15, respectively, in the preceding week, and 31 and 7 in the corresponding week of last year.

The broad advance in footstuffs also carried the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Commodity Index to record levels, reaching 121.58 on December 31, the highest since it was started in 1932. This compared with 101.50 at the beginning of 1934, representing a rise of 19.8 per cent for the year.

Taking the foodstuffs group, as a whole, 18 advances were recorded, against only 3 declines, as compared with 12 advances and 7 declines in the preceding period. Year-end dullness prevailed in the coffee market, trading in futures being very quiet, with only minor changes, reflecting the condition of the actuals market, in which buying is confined to immediate needs. Prices on Brazilian grades remained steady. Spot demand continued light and prices unchanged.

Wider Credit Is Indicated, Observer Says

Accumulated Bank Funds Expected to Flow Out Into Business.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Banking statistics are pointing again to the possibility of an unprecedented expansion of credit.

The excess reserves of the member banks of the Federal Reserve System have risen this week to close to $2,000,000,000, or within a few millions of the record peak last August.

Why this huge reservoir of potential credit fails to flow out into business and industrial uses remains one of the intriguing questions of the current economic situation.

Bank Earnings Decline.

The earnings of the large commercial banks have declined of late, and they complain they are not able to put their funds to work profitably. The $2,000,000,000 of excess reserves—each dollar of which forms a base for a potential $10 of credit—is earning nothing.

Such banking statistics as are available on the subject indicate that credit normally expands slowly in the early stages of recovery.

In the postwar depression, industrial production reached bottom in the summer of 1921, and it was about a year later that bank credit began to expand.

Credit Expands Little.

But if the banking holiday of March, 1933, is taken as the bottom of the current depression, there has been nearly two years of recovery without important change in the volume of bank credit to business outstanding.

If June, 1932, is taken, as some analysts prefer, it is more than two and one-half years.

The volume of "other loans," generally accepted as the key to business credit, shown in the statements of weekly reporting reserve member banks in 91 leading cities, reached a depression low last summer around $4,500,000,000, and as shown in the latest weekly statement, the total was only about $100,000,000 over that and some $200,000,000 under the level prevailing a year ago.

Stocks—Reflection on possibilities inherent on decision by the Supreme Court which might uphold the gold clause, caused uneasiness in Wall street and prices sagged. Selling increased in the late trading. The turnover climbed to 1,378,910 shares.

Bonds—Feverish trading was laid to uneasiness over the gold clause decision. Gold bonds were steady to strong as secondary liens were subjected to pressure. Turnover was the highest since August 9, last, at $26,915,000 for the day.

Curb—Prices reacted sharply in sympathy with losses on the big board. Metals were particularly heavy. Sales volume increased to 222,000 shares.

Wheat—Disturbed by gold clause discussions, grain prices pointed downward. Wheat sold at 1⅝ to 2¼ cents lower. Stop loss selling aided price tumbles. May wheat sold at 99¼; July at 91⅝.

Cotton—Decided slumps in cotton followed losses in other markets as traders harbored fears of the gold clause case. Prices declined 11 to 15 points; January sold at 12.42; May at 12.57.

Sugar — Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.80; refined steady at 4.30 for fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet; Rio No. 7 sold at 9½ and Santos No. 4 at 11¼.

Gold—Bar gold advanced 5 pence to 141 shillings 9½ pence in London. (U. S. equivalent $34.82.)

Dollar—The United States dollar gained in foreign exchanges yesterday. It stood in New York with reference to other currencies, $4.90⅜ to the English pound; 6.60 cents to French franc; and 40.18 cents to the German mark.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading was quieter on the stock exchange today and a weaker tendency prevailed. Industrials were the firmest issues on good buying, while gilt-edged securities, gold mining and oil shares suffered from profit taking. Japanese bonds were weak on fears of their financial position and transatlantic issues were dull. The market closed easy.

Paris—Traders were cautious on the bourse today pending the result of the Saar plebiscite. Led by rentes, firm tendencies were recorded which extended to bank stocks and electric issues. The closing was firm.

Stocks Yield Under Fears Of Gold Case

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Reflection on the possibilities inherent in a decision by the Supreme Court which might uphold the "gold clause" caused Wall Street some uneasiness today.

Stocks were caught in a brief, but rather sharp selling wave in late trading, only partly offset by stiffening at the close.

Many equities lost 1 to as much as 4 points at the lowest, with fractions to about a point recoveries as the session ended.

On Losing List.

Selling was particularly noticeable in some of the groups which have been considered by traders as "inflation equities," notably the mining shares. American Smelting, U. S. Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine and Dome lost 2 to 4 points each and a number of mining shares on the curb and elsewhere dropped similar amounts.

Transactions were brisk in the sell-off, with volume for the day reaching 1,378,910 shares on the New York Stock Exchange. The Associated Press average for 60 selected stocks was off .91 of a point to 39.87, with the 30 industrials used showing the sharpest recession, at 54.08, a loss of 1.15 points.

A few normally inactive issues were able to move against the trend in the share market. Coca-Cola, at 178, gained nearly 5 points, to a new high for a year or more.

Some Leaders Escape.

Nevertheless few of the usual leaders were able to escape the general urge to lighten commitments. Allied Chemical and United States Steel preferred lost about 3 points each, while losses of a point or 2 points or a little more were common in trading favorites, including American Can, American Tobacco B, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, Sears Roebuck, Bethlehem Steel and Montgomery Ward.

It was noted that several pieces of good business news were largely ignored. Carloadings for the week ended January 5, at 498,073, were 72,953 cars better than the previous week, a gain substantially better than seasonal.

Declaration of an extra dividend of 12½ cents a share by National Steel Corporation, the first important bonus payment in this industry for several years, was not reflected in the price of the stock, which followed the list to decline 1½ points.

General Motors Report Record Foreign Sales

New York, Jan. 11.—General Motors sales abroad in 1934 totalled 220,560 units, representing an increase of 81.3 per cent over 1933. For the month of December sales were 16,425 units, a gain of 80.4 per cent over the corresponding month of 1933, and the highest December volume recorded since 1928. These volumes relate to sales of cars and trucks of General Motors manufacture from American, English and German sources.

Sales of the Vauxhall product in England and the Opel product in Germany showed substantial gains during 1934, but the heaviest increases occurred in the instance of the export sales of Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, LaSalle and Cadillac products manufactured in the United States, with volumes running currently 135 per cent over the volume of a year ago.

Less Flour Milled.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Production of flour in the principal milling centers of the United States for December totaled 4,946,933 barrels against 5,101,974 for December, 1933, reports General Mills, Inc.

Curb's Prices Sink After Sag Of Big Board

Metals on Losing List; Sales Volume Climbs to 222,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—The curb market reacted rather sharply today in sympathy with selling on the big board which reflected nervousness on the outcome of the gold clause cases before the Supreme Court.

Metals were particularly heavy, but losses of fractions to around 2 points were well distributed throughout the list. Activity broadened around the beginning of the final hour, but tapered near the close as the list generally steadied.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

EXTENSION of the merit system will be urged by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, probable chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, early in the present session of Congress.

BAKER.

This statement was made by the Georgian in connection with the observance of "National Civil Service Week" sponsored by the American Federation of Government Employes.

Representative Ramspeck's statement follows:

"Up to the present time only one merit system of selecting employes for the Federal Government has been developed in the United States. It is selection under the provisions of the Civil Service law, and throughout the years it has been proven to be the best method for selecting personnel. This method should be extended to all regular Governmental agencies, including Postmasters, and all other positions except those of a confidential nature. It is my intention to advocate such extension during the Seventy-fourth Congress."

On Saturday of National Civil Service Week the A. F. G. E. plans to release a statement from the White House.

E. L. Scott, Treasury, again will preside over the growing union of colored Federal employes of the National Federation of Federal Employes. Following his efforts in organizing three new branches of the local during the last few months, Mr. Scott was unanimously re-elected for 1935. Other officers are: L. R. Mellinger, justice, and W. A. Watson, agriculture, vice presidents; R. N. Carter, Government Printing Office, recording secretary; Mrs. R. Thomas, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, financial secretary; Rev. E. F. Green, treasurer; Rev. S. T. Goffney, bureau, chaplain, and V. W. Hill, Navy, sergeant-at-arms.

Harris & Ewing.

MISS JULIA KERBY, of Federal Housing Administration, is business manager of the dramatic committee of the Curley Club, which will present the comedy, "The Radio Mystery," at Carroll Hall next Thursday night.

THE pay question occupied most of the program of the board of representatives of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes, said to be Washington's largest Government employe union, at its January meeting last night. Representatives from 16 departments, bureaus and agencies also discussed the following questions:

"What rates of pay are fair and just for civil service employes? What is the expedient to seek at the present time in the way of changes in compensation?"

Recommendations were made for the restoration of annual leave under leadership of the Library of Congress branch, which had already forwarded a resolution to NFFE officers urging a change for the better.

Louis S. Murphy, Forest Service, reported on what has been accomplished in industry in employe representation. Miss Bertha Blair, Labor, digested the attempts at employe representation in the Postoffice Department under Postmaster General Hays. Leon Chagnon, Veterans' Administration, outlined the Whitley Councils of employe representation established in 1919 by the British government for its "Civil Servants."

Under direction of Dr. Herbert S. Smith, assistant forester, these findings will be passed on to every member of No. 2 through the branch leaders. Dr. Smith is assisted by Robert Cushman, Library of Congress, and Dr. Howard Edson, Agriculture.

New measurements and calculations by Dr. E. O. Hulburt, Naval Research Laboratory, indicate that the atmospheric temperature above the earth may be as high as 300 degrees Kelvin, or 80.6 degrees Fahrenheit.

Ethnological Discovery.

Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian, recently uncovered near the Colorado-Wyoming border north of Fort Collins a habitation site of the Folsom hunters. It contains stone implements, debris from chipping and flaking, charcoal and ash, and bones of various animals split for the marrow. The bones, Mr. Roberts and his assistant said, were in a stage of fossilization.

James C. Karnes (F), War, is the inventor of a device for lifting a compass needle off its pivot and holding the needle in a fixed position, as when the compass is being carried or not in use.

Soil Erosion Service.

Dr. Walter C. Lowdermilk, vice director, returned this week after a 10-week inspection trip of Southern and Western projects. He helped select a new demonstration area in California and also aided in launching the gigantic 8,200,000 acre project on the upper Gila river in Arizona.

H. G. Calkins, regional director of the Navajo Reservation project, is spending the week here in conference with officials of the Soil Erosion Service and the Indian Service.

Miss Mary Black (P), personnel clerk, is back from a three weeks cruise aboard the S. S. Georgic. She touched at Nassau, Panama, Curacao, Colombia and Venezuela.

Leland Barrows, until recently with the Democratic National Committee and before that connected with a radio station in Lawrence, Kans., has been named to the personnel of Soil Erosion Service.

Walt Mason, Himself

Too Many Diseases.

The doctor bade me eat boiled peas, and drink some evil-tasting teas, to cure an ailment in my neck that threatened making me a wreck. "And when this neck disease is gone," I muttered with a weary yawn, some other ill, that's a disgrace, will come along to take its place; and then, to cure this ailment new, you'll bid me live on liquid glue. This later evil being flown, a siege of gout will make me groan, and you'll prescribe the kind of tripe would make a graven image gripe. So I will let my neck pains slide, until I cross the Great Divide. If there were only one disease, there might be sense in eating peas and drinking suds that you despise and cutting out the cakes and pies. But there are ailments by the score, all camped around a mortal's door; and when the doctor conquers one, the others for their victim run. If from my swanlike neck today, you drove the beastly pain away, tomorrow I'd have spavined knees, or maybe foot and mouth disease, rheumatics in my shoulderblade, or some old tooth would be decayed, or I'd have croup or falling hair, or some bleak symbol of despair, and you would come and say, 'Gadzooks, you'll have to fire your costly cooks; when such a state of health occurs, you must eat salted cockleburs.' If there were only one disease I'd gladly drink your boneset teas, but since a score are on my trail, I'll fill myself with toast on quail."

Gravelly Point Airport Urged In Smith Bill

Representative Asks Annual Outlay of $500,000.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday entered the impending fight over proposed sites for a District airport by introducing a bill in favor of Gravelly Point. The measure would place authority for developing, operating and maintaining the airport in the hands of the superintendent of the National Capital Parks Office.

An annual appropriation of $500,000, to come equally from District and Federal funds, is provided in the bill to finance the project. A limit of $2,000,000 is placed on the cost of acquiring and developing the site. This is the second District airport bill to be offered this session and will lead to a hearing by the House Military Affairs Committee in the near future.

The other bill, sponsored by Representative John J. McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, would establish a commission which would lease and operate Washington Airport for five years and then recommend to Congress five sites for selection of a permanent airport.

Representative Smith's measure states that the District Engineer Commissioner and the United States engineer for this district shall cooperate with the parks superintendent in acquiring and developing Gravelly Point and adjacent land, by purchase or condemnation.

The airport, under the terms of the bill, could not be leased to any other agency for public or private purposes, but could be used by Federal aircraft. Space on the field and in the hangars could be rented to private airplane operators. The bill carries a provision that the superintendent shall cooperate with officials of the Naval Air Station and Bolling Field in drafting and enforcing regulations for the insurance of safe flying.

A SINGLE-HANDED SLAM BID.

It is rather a remarkable experience to pick up a hand which is just about the biggest you have ever held and on which you are unquestionably going to open with a forcing two-bid, and then to hear the bidding opened in front of you by a very sound player and subsequently hear this player rebid. This is what happened to South on the hand below, but despite East's bids South still was able to jump to six even after having received nothing but forced responses from his partner. His hand was just that strong.

West, dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1♡(1)	Dbl.(2)
Pass	1♠	2♡(3)	3♡(4)
Pass	4♣(5)	Pass	6♠(6)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A third hand semipsychic. East's distribution made the bid perfectly safe and his lack of defense in the black suits made East feel that some attempt should be made to inhibit North and South from reaching a game or slam contract.

2—Probably a better bid on the South hand over one heart would have been two hearts—an immediate overcall in the opponents' bid suit.

3—East, not knowing just how strong South's hand was, still had hopes of deceiving the latter and figured that the best way to do this was to simply rebid just as one would with a sound all-around hand.

4—South, with his gigantic rock-crusher, naturally could not be fooled. Wishing another forced response from his partner, he now overcalled in his opponents' suit. Although this overcall in the opponents' suit following a Take-out Double usually shows a desire to play the hand at that suit, South knew that on this particular bidding his partner could not be misled.

5—North, of course, did not like the situation one little bit, and it was with fear and trembling that he showed his magnificent five-card club suit.

6—South could not wait any longer. He knew that at the worst a small slam contract would depend upon a trump break. North, on his failure to bid notrump, should have a doubleton heart. If North had this doubleton heart and nothing but the Queen of spades, he would not be able to bid six over five. In addition, should North by some chance have held the diamond Ace and the spade Queen, the jump to six was the best way to invite a grand slam contract.

Frankly, had I been sitting South, I should have found a slightly better way of getting to six and inviting seven. With a reliable partner I would have bid five notrump—a conventional forcing bid. However, I do not blame this particular South player for not using this bid, as his partner was not particularly strong and there was an outside chance that the latter might pass.

There was nothing to the play of the hand. North and South had to lose a diamond and then the declarer had only to ascertain whether or not there were four clubs in one hand to be able to spread the hand.

The ALLEGED GREAT AUNT

By HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER — JANET AYER FAIRBANKS and MARGARET AYER BARNES

"GOOD LORD! It did. When Lily was—where was she?"

"I don't know." Jane had snatched the book from his hands. "Oh, dear! It doesn't say. In March of '87 she was in Milan. In April, Paris. Then there's a gap. In August, she turned up at Baden Baden. She might have been back here, but it doesn't seem likely."

"No. It doesn't," said Gilbert. "But the record seemed straight."

Jane sighed, then smiled. "Well, it doesn't make much difference to me," she said, "since mother couldn't have known it. She would have felt very differently about both herself and Lily, I'm sure, if she'd thought the knot had been tied. She would have been a different woman, if all that had been true. She'd have given father a better life"—— Her voice died down wistfully.

"I can't be so very sorry for your father," said Gilbert gently. "After all, he had you!" Jane looked up at him with soft eyes in which tears were shining. Gilbert was extraordinarily moved.

"You are a darling." His own words amazed him.

"I believe you wanted to consult a handwriting expert," he said stiffly. "Mixter is my name."

"I'm Gilbert Meade. Where is the police car?"

Must Not Be Biased.

"We did not know what the situation was here, so I thought it wiser to be dropped on the other side of the station," Mr. Mixter said.

Gilbert drew a sigh of relief. "This is Miss Stanton. She and I both think we have reason to be alarmed."

At that the newcomer straightened up. "I said I would prefer not to hear about it," he said.

Gilbert could hardly believe his ears. "I beg your pardon!"

The expert smiled frostily. "I was told that this was a matter of suspected forgery. It would be highly unscientific to approach it with a biased mind."

"Of course," Jane lied smoothly. "I can see that."

Mr. Mixter unbent somewhat. "What I am here for is to study writing which I understand you will submit to me for possible defects on which one can base the assumption that a crime has been committed."

At the word crime Jane's and Gilbert's eyes met. They had not gone so far as that, verbally at least. The expert had taken off his coat, and Jane asked: "Have you had your supper?"

"I did not know how urgent matters were and thought it better not to stop for it. Now that I am here I would rather not eat until I have examined the genuine handwriting."

Gilbert's jaw dropped. Notwithstanding all the time he and Jane had on their hands it had never occurred to either of them to collect any of old Lily's signatures, and he was unwillingly obliged to confess it.

Mixter Was a Sketch.

"I'm sure we can find something in the desk in her room," Jane said cheerfully. Let's go and see."

When the lamps were lit the crowded, fantastic room looked cozy and attractive. Lily's desk was still open, and sitting down before it, Gilbert produced the typewritten letter and signed cheque from his pocket, set them against the nearer of the two Dresden vases on top of the desk, and began searching through it for papers that bore signatures. Saying something about his microscope, Mr. Mixter went out into the hall. Gilbert looked up to find Jane standing beside him. "He's a sketch, isn't he!"

"Yes, but I can't tell you what confidence all those long words give me."

Mr. Mixter returned with the oblong box he had left on the hall table and, seating himself in a somewhat distant arm chair, after a questioning glance at Jane, lighted an enormous straw-colored cigar. He paid no attention to Gilbert as he went through pigeon hole after pigeon hole and drawer after drawer.

"There isn't a thing she has signed here," Gilbert said at last.

"How about the desk in your room?" asked Jane.

"It's as bare as your hand. The burglar cleared that out last night."

"We might find something up in Charles Bradley's room," she declared.

She returned in triumph with a bunch of Lily's canceled checks. "I found all these in one of the drawers," she said. "They are all made out by old Lily. I guess he didn't want them left where any one could see them, and I don't wonder." With the shamelessness of woman she added: "The old lady paid him a lot for beauing her around."

Easy to Imitate.

The expert sat down at the desk and began scrutinizing the signatures. It was some time before he spoke, and Gilbert glanced uneasily at his watch. Finally, Mixter straightened in his chair.

"This is an easy hand to imitate," he remarked.

"Why?" Jane demanded.

Mr. Mixter looked up at her and smiled briefly at her eagerness. "Because it is irregular. A flowing hand is more difficult to copy because it can not be reproduced by the slow and broken movement necessary to the forger."

"Miss De Long is an old woman," Jane told him gravely.

"Nevertheless, you will note that there is also a characteristic flourish to the tail of the 'y' in Lily and in the 'g' in De Long, which ordinarily indicates a certain quality of flamboyance in the writer. And if you will examine the various cheques you will find that the dot over the 'i' on Lily is by no means uniform, which betrays a tendency toward carelessness."

"It's like a miracle, isn't it, Gilbert?"

Mr. Mixter was obviously pleased at this praise, for he smiled shyly at Jane, as he opened the oblong box which he had brought into the room. It proved to be full of various kinds of magnifying glasses. "This is a kind of first-aid kit in detecting forgeries," he explained.

Very seriously he peered through one of the glasses, then another while he turned over the checks. It was some time before he looked up. "I think that I have satisfied myself," he said.

Refused to Rush.

Jane said eagerly, "let's get at the signatures we suspect."

Mr. Mixter rose and began to put away his magnifying glasses. "If you don't mind, I think I would prefer to go out and get my supper first."

Jane looked at him aghast. "Before you try to see if they are forgeries?"

The expert nodded. "After having examined the genuine writing, it is always desireable to allow a considerable space of time to intervene before looking at a possible imitation."

"Why?" asked Gilbert, irritably.

"In order that the mind, after rest and attention to other matters, may attack the problem with freshness, Mr. Meade. I ordinarily prefer to wait a day." The expert was annoyingly tranquil.

Jane's frightened eyes met Gilbert's and he knew she was thinking of what might happen to old Lily while they idled away 24 hours. "We can't possibly delay that long," he said sternly.
